Jury acquits Gurney of five felony charges

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — Former Sen. Edward J. Gurney, staunch defender of President Nixon on the Watergate Committee, was found innocent Wednesday of five felony charges in his marathon bribery-conspiracy trial. A mistrial was declared on the two other counts, including the key conspiracy charge.

The jurors deadlocked 7-5 for acquittal on the conspiracy count and 9-3 for conviction on a count of lying to a grand jury. The judge discharged them, ending a trial that lasted 164 days and included 105 witnesses.

Some of the jurors said the government presented a "very poor" case.

Gurney, blaming his troubles on "Washington," said he didn't think the government would retry him on the deadlocked counts.

The jurors found the Florida Republican innocent of bribery, receiving unlawful compensation and three counts of lying to a grand jury.

"I adjudge you to be not guilty," said U.S. Distict Judge Ben Krentzman on the five counts upon which the jurors agreed.

"As for offenses one and eight, I declare a mistrial," the judge said.

The jurors, who deliberated 10 days, acquitted two other persons of conspiracy charges.

They could not reach a verdict on a conspiracy charge against a fourth defendant, former Gurney aide Joseph Bastien, and the judge declared a mistrial on that charge also. The jurors acquitted Bastien of a charge of receiving unlawful compensation.

Gurney and his associates had been charged with conspiring in a $400,000 influence-peddling scheme involving the Federal Housing Administration.

"The first thing I want to do is express great thanks to everyone who has believed in me all over the country," Gurney said.

"The next thing I want to say is thank heavens for the jury system," he said. "The trial is over. I have a good feeling. I am extremely relieved that it is over."

"This was a fine jury. It got me out of the clutches of the U.S. Department of Justice.

The jurors acquitted suspended Federal Housing Administration officials Ralph Koontz and K. Wayne Swiger on charges of conspiracy.

Gurney's two daughters were sitting in the spectators' section and when the verdicts were read, the husband of daughter Sarah Gurney Stoner, gave her a hug as she began to dab her eyes.

Gurney remained emotionless and looked straight ahead as the judge polled the jurors. Later, standing in the hot sun outside the court, he said he did not think the government would take him to trial again.

"If they couldn't prove a case after plea negotiations with all the key witnesses and certainly some perjury, I don't think they will try it," Gurney said.

Chief prosecutor Harvey Schlesinger said he had "no comment."

Swiger blew kisses with both hands to the jurors as they boarded a bus, saying, "Thank you, thank you."

"The power of the government is overwhleming, but thank God for honest jurors," said Koontz. "Some of their ordeals must be the same as the accused."

Hoffa's son demands 'brother' take lie test

LAKE ORION, Mich. (UPI) — The son of former Teamsters President James R. Hoffa said Wednesday night he believes Charles L. "Chuckie" O'Brien "has some knowledge of what happened" to the missing labor leader and demanded he take a polygraph test.

James P. Hoffa said O'Brien, his father's former bodyguard and adopted son, telephoned the family home after talking with FBI agents but gave no explanation of his mysterious disappearance over the past five days.

O'Brien, who dropped out of sight the day after Hoffa disappeared a week ago, surfaced suddenly Wednesday. The FBI questioned him for more than three hours.

"I demanded he take a polygraph test, but he indicated he wouldn't do that," Hoffa said. "He hesitated, stalled and said 'maybe later'."

"There is no bad feeling between us," Hoffa said, "but I believe he has knowledge of what happened because of his associations and activities of the past week. I would like to see him take a polygraph test to help get this matter cleared up."

In talking with CBS-TV news, the younger Hoffa said, "I think somewhere, somehow there is a relationship between my father's disappearance and his attempt to return to power in the union. There are some things that indicate the possibility he might be alive, which I'd rather not go into right now."

Hoffa told reporters at the family home in Lake Orion that O'Brien had telephoned shortly after meeting with the FBI and told him he had given his story to authorities but gave no other details.

Earlier, O'Brien emerged from his talk with authorities to face a battery of reporters and cameramen and refused to say a word. He let his lawyer, James Burdick, do the talking for him. All Burdick had to say was "no comment."

Then O'Brien and Burdick sped off in a car, leaving still largely a mystery the question of where the one-time Irish kid who was taken into Hoffa's home has been since Thursday.

Burdick did say O'Brien had agreed to meet with FBI agents, police and union officials in the Teamsters Joint Council No. 43 building "in order to satisfy their inquiries."

"I believe he has done that," Burdick said.

Wants work done on energy legislation

Ford may ruin Congress' vacation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford is seriously considering calling Congress back from its month-long recess to deal with energy legislation, according to two congressional Republicans who met with him Tuesday night.

Sen. William V. Roth, R-Del., and Rep. Barber B. Conable, Jr., R-N.Y., said Ford made no commitment in response to their urging that Congress be called into special session.

But Roth and Conable said in a joint statement that calling back Congress is "certainly an option being seriously considered."

Congress left last Friday and is not due to return until Sept. 3. Ford has the constitutional power to interrupt the recess by calling a special session.

Roth and Conable said they discussed the possibility of a special session with Ford during a working dinner honoring Takeo Miki, Prime Minister of Japan.

They also held discussions with Federal Energy Administrator Frank Zarb, Commerce Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton, and Donald Rumsfeld, the White House chief of staff.

Shortly before leaving, Congress approved a six-month extension of price controls which has kept the price of "old" oil, about 60 per cent of domestic production, at $5.25 a barrel. Ford's proposals to phase out the price controls over either 30 or 39 months were rejected earlier by Congress.

The current extension expires Aug. 31 at which time the price of the oil could soar to world levels of $12-13 a barrel.

Despite pleas from some members of Congress, the White House said Wednesday that Ford is virtually certain to veto the extension.

Presidential Press Secretary Ron Nessen noted that Ford said Monday "there is a 99 and nine-tenths per cent chance that I am going to veto" the extension and said the President's position is "precisely the same" as it was two days ago.

In their statement, Roth and Conable said, "Congress has repeatedly told the President and the American people it needs more time to develop an effective energy program, but instead of acting it has taken five recesses in seven months."

Change at least five years away

S-burg won't reapportion

By HARRIET LEEDS
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — The Stroudsburg Borough Council Wednesday decided not to take any action on reapportionment.

The council had planned in July to decide whether or not to realign the borough's five wards or switch to an expanded, seven-member, at-large council format at their August meeting.

After discussion, Second Ward Councilman Howard Popkin persuaded his colleagues to postpone a decision at least until the 1980 federal census.

Popkin said he had consulted people in other communities and found that "those that are not at-large are doing absolutely nothing and get little reaction from the state."

"If we continue with the ward system," Popkin said, "We don't have to do anything until the next census. We don't have to spend money to realign the wards at this time."

Popkin continued, "The next census is only four years away. The complexion of the borough will change drastically in the next four years."

He referred to the housing construction in the West Main Street and Dreher Avenue area.

Fifth Ward Councilman Joseph Wallace said if the council changed to an at-large format, the two additional councilmen would cost the borough $2,400. He compared this figure to the approximate $3,000 it would cost to do a census.

"I don't think we would have to do it (a census) every year," Wallace said. Wallace favors maintaining the ward system.

First Ward Councilman Stewart Woody, who had reserved expressing an opinion on the matter until Wednesday, said he preferred the ward system because he fears the First Ward would lose representation.

Mayor Warren Loney favors an at-large system and said having two more councilmen would "put forth more ideas" and help out the overloaded committee system.

The 1968 Commonwealth Constitution requires municipalities with a ward system to have equally apportioned districts as outlined under the "one man, one vote" edict by the United States Supreme Court.

Agatha Christie kills famous detective

LONDON, (UPI) — Hercule Poirot has been killed. Agatha Christie did it. All that remains to be known is motive and method.

And the millions of admirers of the little Belgian detective, who ranks with Sherlock Holmes as one of the world's most famous solvers of crimes, must wait a month or two to find out.

Both Dame Agatha's American and British publishers confirmed that the bald, diminutive and moustached detective meets his demise after one last stroke of cerebrative genious in "Curtain," subtitled "Poirot's last case," due for publication shortly after Dame Agatha's 85th birthday this Autumn.

However, neither the publishers nor Dame Agatha is talking about the exact circumstances of M. Poirot's end. "Otherwise, it would ruin the book for the readers," Gina Sussens of Collins, Dame Agatha's British publishers, said.

In the final book Poirot, who at an age estimated to be at least 130 years understandably suffers from arthritis and some heart trouble, returns to the scene of his first great triumph after retiring to England from a brilliant career with the Belgian police.

But the country house of Styles, where Poirot began his illustrious private career, has also changed over the years and is now a guest house to which Poirot repairs, moving about in a wheelchair and requiring assistance from his old friend Hastings to get from his bedroom to the public lounge.

Government's can lid plan running out of supplies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A government plan to plug the shortage in home canning lids is running out of its supply only seven days after the project began, it was reported Wednesday.

Goodwill Industries of America, which is distributing the lids under a cooperative arrangement with the Commerce Department, said it was searching for more tops to try to keep the project going.

The charitable group arranged with the Commerce Department to buy lids from three manufacturers and to sell them in lots of up to 108 per request to anyone writing its headquarters in Minneapolis, Minn.

"The response has been tremendous," a Goodwill official said, adding that nearly all the group's supply of 2.7 million lids is already accounted for.

In addition to giving worried home canners another possible source of supply, the plan provided employment for the handicapped.

However, Rep. Charles A. Vanik, D-Ohio, criticized the program, asking how the government could get lids when no one else could. "Where are these lids to come from?" he asked. "Are they to come from the production that might have been distributed throughout the normal chain?"

The Goodwill official said he did not know what the outlook was for obtaining more lids. The major suppliers are working overtime and also have allocation systems for supplying supermarkets in order to meet what government officials call a critical shortage.

This year's production of replacement caps and lids was estimated at nearly 2 billion, but it appeared some lids would not reach canners in time for this season's canning.

Terrorists board getaway plane

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (UPI) — Hooded Japanese Red Army terrorists Wednesday left the U.S. Embassy offices they seized two days earlier and marched aboard a plane with their final 15 hostages to await a flight to any Arab country willing to give them asylum. After several countries rejected them, Libya said yes.

Officials said the Japan Air Lines DC8 carrying the five guerrillas, one of them a woman, and five comrades released from Japanese jails would probably leave from Subang Airport at around 8 a.m. today (8:30 p.m. EDT Wednesday.)

Malaysian Prime Minister Tun Abdul Razak said four government officials — two Malaysian and two Japanese — would accompany the guerrillas, their fellow Japanese Red Army members and the nine-man plane crew to guarantee the safety of the terrorists.

Among the final 15 captives, all men, held under a death threat were U.S. Consul General Robert Stebbins, businessman Gerald Lancaster of Houston, Tex., and Swedish Charge d'Affaires Fredrik Bergenstrahle.

Razak said he expected the complex five-stage exchange of hostages and freed prisoners to be peaceful.

Japanese Ambassador Michiaki Suma said the Red Army guerrillas would be allowed to keep their light weapons but any heavy weapons, hand grenades and explosives would be unloaded and placed in the aircraft baggage compartment.

The leftist terrorists said they wanted to be flown to an Arab nation and Malaysian and Japanese officials called some 10 countries.

Congress' pay hike angers ex-legislator

WASHINGTON (UPI) — H. R. Gross, one of the most tightfisted lawmakers ever to serve on Capitol Hill, has sent an angry letter to President Ford telling him to veto the bill giving pay raises to members of Congress.

Gross, an Iowa Republican who retired in January after 26 years in Congress, gained a reputation as the most reluctant appropriator in that body.

Retirement hasn't changed Gross's habits. The carbon copy of his letter to Ford, which he released Wednesday, was typed on the back of his old congressional stationery.

The copy was also mailed to the press in one of his old envelopes, but he had carefully crossed out the words "Official Business" and placed a 10-cent stamp over the frank which lets congressmen send mail free.

The irascible Gross told Ford, "Unless you exercise your veto you will have approved an act of irresponsibility on the part of a majority of Congress which ... brazenly seeks to protect its selfish ends."

He said, "Every candidate for Congress last November — and there was no lack of them — knew that the pay was $42,500 a year. It is not of record that a single one of them told the voters that if elected they would immediately move to fatten their paychecks."

U.S. businessman kidnaped in Bogota

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — U.S. Embassy officials, Sears Roebuck executives and police waited all day Wednesday for a call from the armed men who kidnaped Sears' vice president Donald E. Cooper but none came.

"We're just waiting," a Sears official said. "There has been no communication."

Police said no ransom had been demanded.

Cooper, 50 of North Platte, Neb., vice president of merchandising for Sears in Colombia, was intercepted as he arrived at his home Tuesday evening by five men and a woman, all of them masked and armed with pistols and submachine guns.

They fired a shot near the ear of Cooper's driver and roughed up a maid who opened the door to let her boss in, then drove off with Cooper in hiw own car.

The embassy, Sears and Colombian authorities coordinated efforts to receive any calls from the kidnapers with ransom demands. A solitary uniformed policeman guarded Cooper's empty two-story home in Bogota's posh northern residental section and a plain-clothes detective manned the telephone inside.

A Sears spokesman said Cooper's wife and two children had gone to Chicago to be in close touch with the company's head office and would not immediately return to Colombia.

What's news

Rocky kicks off non-campaign

WASHINGTON — Nelson A. Rockefeller will kick off his "non-campaign" for the 1976 Republican vice presidential campaign with a lavish party in his native state of Maine later this month. Rockefeller insists "I'm not running for anything." But his travel schedule for the coming months rivals that of Ronald Reagan, George Wallace and other "non-candidates." A Rockefeller spokesman said Wednesday the heavy travel schedule was being undertaken with the "encouragement of the White House. President Ford has urged Rockefeller to get out to meet Republicans in an attempt to lessen conservative dislike of the vice president."

FBI out of Baker break-in WASHINGTON — The FBI has pulled out of an investigation into the bizarre break-in at the house of Sen. Howard H. Baker, R-Tenn., after determining that no government property was stolen, a spokesman said Wednesday. Baker, a member of the Senate committee investigating the CIA, said he was baffled by the break-in because the burglars did not take anything even though items valued at $40,000 were in the home. Spencer Davis, a spokesman for the intelligence committee, said other members of the panel were alerted Tuesday to what had happened to their colleague in case they want to order up tighter security at their homes.

AMC reverses loss trend

DETROIT — American Motors Corp. reported Wednesday it earned $10.1 million in its spring quarter, reversing a string of three straight quarterly deficits of more than $60 million. Chairman Roy D. Chapin and President William V. Luneburg predicted another profitable quarter between July and September, but said the firm would show a loss for its fiscal year that ends Sept. 30 because of the huge losses earlier in the year. Despite the profit, AMC directors voted to omit paying the regular 10-cent semiannual dividend, following the lead of the firm's bigger competitors who have either cut out or reduced dividends this year.

Indira off legal hook

NEW DELHI, India — With opposition lawmakers continuing their boycott, the upper house of Parliament unanimously approved Wednesday the government bill that will wipe out the conviction of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi on electoral corruption charges. Following passage of the bill after a one-hour debate, the upper house began working on a constitutional amendment that would make election of a prime minister immune from challenge in a court of law. The new bill is retroactive. When signed into law by President Fakhruddin Ali Ahmed — probably before this weekend — it will invalidate Mrs. Gandhi's conviction June 12 by a high court of charges of electoral malpractices in the 1971 campaign.

Hearst testimony delay sought

HARRISBURG — The wife of a radical sports figure will ask a federal judge today to delay her appearance before a grand jury investigating reports that fugitive Patty Hearst was harbored on a Pennsylvania farm. Micki Scott said the government's investigation has been "outrageous." She accused the FBI of "widespread harassment, terrorization and persecution." Her attorneys want a delay of at least three weeks. U.S. District Court Judge R. Dixon Herman will hold a hearing on her request at 9:30 a.m. She and her husband, Jack Scott, are suspected by the FBI of renting the South Canaan, Pa. farmhouse where Miss Hearst and two other Symbionese Liberation Army members allegedly stayed for a time last summer.

Moss reverses info stand

WASHINGTON — Rep. John E. Moss, an author of the Freedom of Information Act, Wednesday abandoned his attempt to stop eight federal agencies from releasing information to the press under the Act. Moss, D-Calif., announced his decision hours after a federal court told the agencies not to comply with the prohibition issued by Moss House oversight and investigations subcommittee. At issue were the documents and working papers the eight federal agencies had compiled for the Moss subcommittee, which had been investigating the policies and performances of the agencies.

Pope warns Jesuit educators

VATICAN CITY — Pope Paul VI warned Jesuit educators Wednesday of a growing secularization of Catholic universities that he said was undermining the morals of the young. Addressing 76 rectors of Jesuit universities at a special audience, the Pope said they must guard against "indulging in a doctrinal relativism or a moral permissiveness incompatible with the characteristics of a university that wants to call itself Catholic."

Judge reduces charge in Little trial

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Superior Court Judge Hamilton Hobgood Wednesday ruled the state had produced "insufficient evidence" to convict Joan Little for first degree murder and reduced the charge against her to second degree murder or voluntary manslaughter.

"The court is aware there are many facts in this case to which we do not now have the answers," said Hobgood. "I think everyone who has heard this case is aware of that."

"Without all the publicity and clamor, this case would go to the jury as a first degree murder charge," grumbled District Attorney William C. Griffin.

"I don't know about that," responded Hobgood.

The reduction of the charges came on a series of motions filed after the prosecution abruptly rested its case, to the apparent surprise of the jury and the evident glee of the defense.

Miss Little, 21 and black, is accused of the murder of 62-year-old white jailer Clarence Alligood. The state claims she stabbed him with an icepick in an escape attempt. The defense claimed he tried to rape her.

Hobgood first denied a motion to dismiss the first degree charges, then granted the motion to reduce the charge. The defense then moved to dismiss the second degree or voluntary manslaughter case.

Hobgood said, "At this stage of the trial the motion is denied."

The judge said he had been contemplating a reduction of charges for several days.

A first degree murder conviction, carrying a mandatory death penalty, requires the state to prove premeditation. On a second degree charge, with a maximum penalty of life in prison, it must prove malice, intent or excessive force. Voluntary manslaughter, carrying a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison, requires proof of intent.

Chief defense attorney Jerry Paul, arguing that the charge be further reduced to manslaughter, said, "The strongest point in this case is the icepick. If the state can't put the icepick in her possession, then the state has no case."

No testimony was offered that Miss Little was ever seen with the icepick that killed Alligood, and no attempt was made to fingerprint it.

Paul told reporters, "I'm glad I no longer have to worry about whether or not Joan will have to go to the gas chamber."

The defense will begin its case today, Paul said. "We will put on some witnesses that the state would have put on if they had been interested in the truth."

Defense attorneys argued for more than an hour that prosecutors had failed to produce enough evidence for a reasonable person to believe that Miss Little killed white jailer Clarence Alligood, 62, in an attempt to escape the Beaufort County jail.

Miss Little claims she killed Alligood when he tried to rape her.

House panel finally gets information from CIA

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With subpoenas and closed sessions, the House Intelligence Committee is finally beginning to get the information it wants from the Defense Department and the CIA, chairman Otis Pike said Wednesday.

Pike said CIA Director William E. Colby had been forthcoming in a closed session Monday on the Intelligence budget and was now supplying documents and information the 13-member panel needs in its investigation.

The New York Democrat also said the Defense Department had fully complied within 24 hours to subpoenas demanding an unpublished 1970 internal report on the military intelligence community and a top secret National Security Agency document.

During a three-hour open session Wednesday, the committee questioned Colby, who is also overall director of all U.S. intelligence agencies, on a wide range of matters, particularly whether the NSA is tapping or intercepting telephone calls involving American citizens, at home or abroad.

Colby refused to answer but added he would "try to respond in executive session."

But in answer to other questions, Colby conceded that Americans could be involved in communications intercept — "incidentally we intercept Americans" — because they couldn't be eliminated from certain foreign monitoring for technical reasons.

He read a 26-page statement on the organizational setup of the CIA and said the organization was careful with the taxpayers' money, even turning a profit on its Air American airline in Southeast Asia and some other ventures.

One of these, he said, was a financial enterprise through which the CIA can pay annuities "to individuals whose links with the U.S. government must remain secret."

Colby insisted the CIA needed greater "financial flexibility" than other federal agencies.

For example: "If we are offered a document of tremendous intelligence value, we cannot tell the seller to return next year when we have had an opportunity to budget for it. And we cannot ask the Congress to vote a supplemental appropriation without attracting exactly the sort of unwelcome attention from abroad that we are anxious to avoid."

Colby added, "we cannot simply adhere to a rigid plan when the world around us is changing."

The CIA director said he believes that the committee will find the agency was not engaged in a "massive illegal domestic intelligence operation."

Portuguese marines halt anti-Red violence

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — Portugal's military government sent left-wing marines into the conservative north Wednesday to put down mounting anti-Communist violence spurred on by mutinous behavior of troops at the scene.

Army sources said the actions of the soldiers, who cheered mobs sacking Communist headquarters in two towns, has sparked fears in Lisbon of a military rebellion.

The leftist military regime ordered 140 marines from Lisbon to Porto to replace army units originally sent to protect the Communists.

The military commander of the northern region abruptly withdrew the troops shortly after they opened the doors to the Communist headquarters in Vila Nova de Famalicao to anti-Communist crowds and cheered as the mobs wrecked it.

Security forces in nearby Santo Tirso also declined to take effective action when crowds there Tuesday night invaded the local Communist headquarters and the offices of two other leftist groups and burned the furniture and documents they found inside.

Army sources said the mutinous behavior of the troops was creating growing concern in the military hierarchy, which feared a possible military rebellion.

They said unrest was rising in other army units, but that the navy and marines were still loyal to the regime, while the air force was divided.

Disabled vets get benefit hike

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford Wednesday signed legislation providing "cost-of-living" increases of up to 12 per cent in compensation benefits for military veterans with service-connected disabilities and their survivors.

"The nation owes them a special debt of gratitude," he said in a statement.

The White House, in announcing Ford's action, said the higher benefits would be retroactive to Aug. 1 and be available for 2.2 million veterans, including 1.3 million who served in World War II and 425,500 in uniform during the Vietnam era.

In his statement, Ford noted that the expanded aid would cost the government an extra $500 million a year when he was trying to hold down federal spending and that the cost-of-living adjustments went far beyond his proposed ceiling of 5 per cent for all federal benefit programs.

Under the bill, called the 1975 Veterans Disability Compensation and Survivors Benefits Act, the White House said:

— Veterans with a disability rating of 50 per cent or less will get a 10 per cent increase in monthly compensation rates.

— Those rated 60 per cent or more disabled will receive a 12 per cent increase plus a 10 per cent boost in additional compensation that these veterans get for their dependents.

— "Statutory awards" will be increased 12 per cent.

— The clothing allowance given veterans with artifical limbs will go up from $150 to $175.

The White House said widows and children would get a 12 per cent monthly increase.

President Ford promises U.S. will defend Japan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford, on the 30th anniversary of the atomic bombing of Hiroshima, promised Prime Minister Takeo Miki Wednesday the United States will defend Japan against any attack "whether by nuclear or conventional forces."

The two leaders rounded out two days of talks with a renewed pledge of friendship and cooperation between their countries, along with agreement to keep a close eye on renewed antagonism between North and South Korea, on Japan's western doorstep.

Miki said later in a Press Club speech that while Japan will continue to bolster its defenses, "we have forsworn the acquisition of offensive weapons, and will never acquire nuclear weapons."

Ford and Miki, after two meetings Tuesday and a followup session Wednesday, said in a joint statement:

"The security of the Republic of Korea is essential to the maintenance of peace on the Korean peninsula, which in turn is necessary for peace and security in East Asia, including Japan.

"The President reassured the prime minister that the United States would continue to abide by its defense commitments to Japan under the Treaty of Mutual Cooperation and Security in the event of armed attack against Japan, whether by nuclear or conventional forces."

In apparent reference to the U.S. commitment to both Japan and South Korea, where 40,000 American troops remain, the joint statement said:

"The President, recognizing the importance of Asia for world peace and progress, reaffirmed that the United States would continue to play an active and positive role in that region and would continue to uphold its treaty commitments there."

Mills disillusioned with current Congress

LITTLE ROCK (UPI) — Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., said Wednesday he was disillusioned with Congress and had not yet decided whether to run for re-election next year.

"Congress hasn't accomplished as much as I would have liked it to," said Mills. He blamed the Democratic leadership, President Ford and himself.

"I'm not satisfied with the Democratic leadership and its failure to get us together on solutions to the problems," Mills said.

But, he said, there's "as much fault downtown" as in Congress, "and I haven't supplied the leadership I have in the past."

Mills said he was not advocating a change of leadership in Congress and he praised President Ford.

"Nobody in the White House performs as well as you would like, but I don't know anyone, under the circumstances — the economy — who could have done a better job," Mills said.

Once considered the most powerful member of Congress, Mills resigned under pressure the chairmanship of the House Ways and Means Committee earlier this year and entered a hospital for alcoholism.

Asked about statements he should resign now and allow someone else to be elected and begin learning the congressional ways, Mills replied, "In all confidence, I may be doing someone a favor by saving him from his first impression of Congress this session."

Polk Twp. agrees to pave road

KRESGEVILLE — More than 25 residents appeared Monday night at the Polk Township supervisors' meeting asking that a three-mile stretch of the Middle Creek Road be resurfaced.

Following an hour-long debate on the topic, the supervisors agreed to top a 1.8-mile stretch of the road as part of their 1976 road project. The road will be topped from Rte. 534 to Township Road No. 439.

The supervisors explained that the road project for this year was already completed and they explained that three miles of the Middle Creek Road will be too much to top in the same year.

The residents seemed satisfied that at least two-thirds of the Middle Creek stretch will be redone next year.

The supervisors have tentatively named the roads in Polk Township with help from the Progressive Women's Club. The names are expected to be advertized publicly this month and are expected to come up for adoption at the board's regular September meeting. Residents will have an opportunity to present their input on the road names at that time.

The supervisors have tried to select historical and authentic names for all roads, and expect to erect road signs on approximately one third of the roads this year. A total of $1,500 has been set aside to purchase road signs. A similar amount is expected to be allocated in the next two years to complete the sign project.

Although there is no indication which signs will be erected first, the supervisors are considering placing signs initially on roads that intersect with state roads.

The supervisors are also expected to authorize the drawing up of gridded emergency maps for use by the fire company, West End ambulance association, state police and the Pleasant Valley Schools, once the roads are named.

A fence at the township dump has been erected at a cost of approximately $2,500 to discourage dumping on off hours. New dumping hours are from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday and Saturday and from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m., Wednesday.

The supervisors are also considering issuing either a sticker or card to Polk Township taxpayers, which will entitle them to bring trash to the local dump.

The measure, although not discussed formally, will cut out illegal dumping.

The supervisors feel other residents using the dump are partically responsible for the township having to outlay an average of $1,000 a month for trash collection.

The supervisors are now in the process of filing for federal flood insurance and have announced that revenue sharing funds received this year will be used to repair roads.

Poor pay discourages assessors

SAYLORSBURG — Ross Township is currently without an assessor and if the salary is what the supervisors think it is, the municipality may not readily fill the position in the near future.

At their regular meeting Monday the Ross Township supervisors said they were hopefull that someone could be found to serve as assessor. The supervisors said they thought the salary for the position however, was still only $2 an hour with the assessor using his own car to travel throughout the township.

The three-man board instructed Secretary Mrs. Joan Kresge to contact county officals to see what the current salary is and report back to the supervisors at their September meeting.

The supervisors announced that their road project has been completed and asked one of their insurance agents to bid on errors and omissions insurance for the township.

The supervisors reviewed the final plan for Vista Estates, the former Lake Fawn et Echo development, which is located on the Meixsell Valley road. The supervisors refused to sign the plan until their sewage enforcement officer can inspect the development.

There is still no word on the township's possible acquisition of approximately three acres of property on the Meixsell Valley Road which will be used, if purchased, to construct a shed to house township equipment.

As in the past, federal revenue sharing funds received this year, will be put into an account to construct the equipment shed.

The township is still in the process of filing for federal flood insurance. Solicitor Edward Hoffner is drawing up a building permit ordinance to meet the requirements of the federal flood insurance application.

The supervisors expect that the ordinance will be drawn up and advertised for adoption at their September meeting.

There have been no new development in naming roads in Ross Township.

West End wanderings

Spiderman weaves our way

By MAURE, N RUFE
Pocono Record Reporter

BRODHEADSVI, E — The big news exclusive story of the week is that Spiderman is coming to Brodheadsville in the flesh and will be talking personally with West End children for more than two hours one day this fall.

Decked out in his traditional red and blue costume, complete with a black spider emblazened on his chest and a red webbed mask over his face, Spiderman will make his debut at Stafford's Drugs as part of a nationwide campaign to launch Hudson's new Spiderman vitamins.

Four tentative dates for the personal appearance have been selected by owner Kern Stafford, but no specific time has been agreed upon yet. Spiderman will, however be here in September or October, probably on a Saturday.

Special coupons for the Spiderman vitamins will be available during the appearance and children will be able to get special Spiderman posters through the promotion.

In connection with the personal appearance, national television spot advertisements promoting the new vitamins will begin in the near future.

It appears there may be only one trouble with the Spiderman theme. In a brief poll taken among children at the Brodheadsville shopping center after the news leaked out about the big appearance, every child under 10 said quizzically, "Who's Spiderman?"

Word has it that even pharmacy owner Kern Stafford was a little in doubt as to exactly what the super character was famous for. But that minor snare probably won't effect the big appearance in the West End at all. The chances are that by the time Spiderman does get here, most children and residents alike will know who the famed hero was and is and will be happy to shake hands with him personally.

The famous Appenzell Sunday School picnic has been set for 6 p.m., Aug. 9 and will feature clams, pizza and other homemade goodies. There's bound to be a huge cakewalk as usual and the Pocono Mountain High School Band will be entertaining from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m. The affair is open to the public so just bring your lawn chair and settle down for an evening of old-fashioned West End relaxation.

The Quiet Valley Living Historical Farm is now in the process of preparing for a special harvest festival that is bound to be a real show stopper, especially for native West Enders.

On the bill of fare for the two-day event, which is set for Oct. 11 and Oct. 12, will be old-fashioned games and demonstrations of handicrafts and food preparation. The county fair will also include dramatic skits, square dancing, an antique auction and the awarding of a homemade quilt.

The quilt is being made in the Dresden plate pattern this summer at the farm.

Admission for the festival will be $1 for adults and $.50 for children, and historical farm members will be admitted free.

More specific details will be released as the festival weekend approaches, but be sure to mark Oct. 11 and Oct. 12 on your entertainment calendar now to make sure you don't miss this harvest festival.

For you horse lovers, a special open pony show and demonstration race will be held 9 a.m. Aug. 29 at the West End Fairgrounds in Gilbert. That's just one of the many events that is being held during fair week this year. We're also told that the fence around the new land acquired for parking at the West End Fair is almost up and will be completed in time for the big event.

A new sports program for both girls and boys has begun in Stroudsburg similar to the popular Little League competition that has involved so many West End youngsters in past years. The Greater Pocono Soccer League has been formed to provide soccer instruction and games for boys ages seven to 15 and girls ages eight to 15. The league, which operates each Saturday morning, consists of one hour of clinic and instruction along with a game between teams divided into three age groups. Emphasis will be on instruction in the game of soccer, however, rather than in competition between teams. The classes officially began this week at the Stroudsburg Sports Camp on Rte. 191.

Don't forget the big Jackson Township Historical Society meeting at 7:30 p.m. next Monday night at the Reeders School. The public is invited to attend.

That annual picnic sponsored for the senior citizens of the West End will be held on Aug. 17 at the Brookmont Nursing Home. Again this year the event will be sponsored by the Western Pocono Jaycees and the Western Pocono Junior Women's Club. The picnic is for all West End citizens, even those who do not reside at the Brookmont home. The picnic is being held at the nursing facility grounds, however, because of the difficulty of transporting some of the Brookmont patients elsewhere.

Walter Lane's orchestra will be entertaining at the next regular meeting of the Fairview Senior Citizen's Club of the West End at noon on Wednesday, Aug. 13, so don't forget to mark your calendar.

Kirkridge is selling five pieces of property on its Rte. 191 facility in an attempt to reduce some of its current debt of $98,000. Although the properties have been listed with a local realtor, Kirkridge supporters will have a first chance at the listings, which include a three-bedroom house for $45,000, a three-bedroom house for $25,000, possibly a home with five small bedrooms for $20,000, two lots of 1.2 acres each at $2,000 and 18 wooded acres and stream at $1,500 an acre.

According to the director of Kirkridge, the sales will not change the atmosphere of the Kirkridge facility, which includes more than 300 acres of land.

In their special meeting Friday, the Jackson Township supervisors passed that ordinance which will require all developers to post the appropriate bond to complete roads in their subdivisions before final plans will be signed by the supervisors.

The next Jackson Township meeting will be a special one Tuesday night to discuss what will be done with revenue sharing funds the township will receive this year. Local rumors have it that at least one of the supervisors would like to give a sizable donation, possibly as much as $5,000, to the Jackson Township Fire Company. That's a big chunk of dough, in view of the fact that the municipality already pays $3,600 a year in rent to the company to house township equipment. Only the results of the meeting will tell if and how much the fire company will get, however. On the QT, we understand the supervisors are also looking into buying a tape recorder to tape all future meetings.

We can't give you a final score on that bicentennial softball game between the state police at Swiftwater and the Jackson Township Jacks and Jills, because we are told the two teams had so much fun, nobody quite remembers exactly what the score was. The game was a hilarious success, however, with Paul Strausser dressing in a red wig and women's clothing for the game. "Lucille at the Bat," as Paul was tagged for the day, was escorted to the famous game by the local fire truck.

West End fair plans popping

BRODHEADSVILLE — It's definite — fireworks will be displayed at the West End Fair this year on Aug. 29. The rain date is Aug. 30.

The display plans received official final approval at the Chestnuthill Township supervisors' meeting Tuesday night. The matter was one of the few items of business acted upon during the hour-long session.

The township's road project for 1975 has been completed and the township is awaiting arrival of its newly purchased road sweeper.

It was announced that line painting on several heavily traveled roads has been completed under a new federally funded project.

Revenue sharing money coming into the township this year will be spent on resurfacing roads.

After first year, President rates 'A' for accessibility

By DONALD R. LARRABEE
Ottaway News Service
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Gerald Ford, after one year in office, is getting a mixture of high marks and low marks as a leader, depending upon the political source. But he rates an "A" for accessibility in most quarters.

The front door at the White House is open a lot wider these days. When Ford took office August 9, 1974, the shattered presidency of Richard Nixon left in its wake a pervasive disbelief in the processes and the people of government. He committed the administration to better communications with the press and public.

While reporters continue to find fault with some aspects of the White House news operation, most of them concede that the President himself is more accessible than any of his recent predecessors, that the press conference and briefings are more productive and that the staff at the White House is both available and candid.

But something else has happened that is good for both the presidency and the country. Ford vowed to make himself more accessible to his advisers and to members of Congress and citizens' groups with varying perspectives.

Shortly before he took the office, he read "The Twilight of the Presidency" by former Lyndon Johnson aide George Reedy. Ford concluded from that reading that the worst thing that has happened to several occupants of the White House is that they allowed themselves to become isolated.

There are days now when the visitor list is so long at the White House that you wonder how Jerry Ford gets any paperwork done. One of the Ford innovations is a weekly "congressional hour" at which members of Congress can present gifts, constituents and even their complaints. It lasts about an hour—roughly five minutes to a visitation.

One day recently, Sen. Ted Stevens and Rep. Don Young of Alaska came through the gate with a huge relief map of the State of Alaska sculpted out of remnants of the steel and piping used in building the Alaska pipeline.

They were followed by Sen. Claiborne Pell and a group from Newport, R.I. to present a replica of the Newport artillery company flag which first flew in 1775. The flagmaker and the mayor of Newport were there. Then came Rep. Guy Vander Jagt of Michigan with Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Boyink of Grand Haven who gave the President a bicentennial quilt and pillow.

Out in the Rose Garden, Rep. Elford Cederberg was introducing a group of 64 University of Michigan students who are here this summer serving as interns. And so it went . . . but that was only one hour in a day that began at 7:40 with staff meetings in the Oval Office. At 8 a.m. the President had breakfast with about 130 House members on the Turkish military aid issue. At noon, he met with six senators back from the Soviet Union.

Ford is making good on his pledge of an open administration in still another way. He created an Office of Public Liaison last year to help him get together with every conceivable public outside group. William Baroody Jr. has mapped out four approaches, with some people coming to the White House and the White House going to the people, as well.

Every other Wednesday, Baroody schedules a half-day meeting in which 18 to 30 national leaders of private sector groups or chief executive officers of private industry come to the Cabinet room for informal talks with top administration officials and senior White House aides. The President participates part of the time. There have been nine such sessions thus far on everything from construction industry problems to women in business.

Each Tuesday, larger half-day sessions are planned with private sector groups to discuss such topics as health care, energy, consumerism, and revenue sharing. There have been 21 of these meetings.

Baroody has also arranged 88 organizational briefings or discussions on specific issues of concern to visiting groups such as state and local chamber of commerce executives.

Finally, there have been five presidential "town hall" meetings in different cities, providing a chance for the President and his men to get out of Washington and shoot the breeze with grass roots leaders. The White House says Ford has reached 7,500 national, state and local leaders through these various approaches.

Some fears are now being voiced that Ford's staffers will make a public relations orgy of his accessibility. As the election year approaches, the critics say there will be a greater temptation to get the President around the country for patently political purposes. But in a sense, the Presidency is part press agentry, anyway. Accessibility is the beginning, not the end.

Town-gown bill insufficient

Town-gown conflicts have been particularly unpleasant when they descend to personal levels, but East Stroudsburg isn't too crazy about the revenue relationship either.

One step has been taken to resolve the problem — essentially, that state facilities use local services but pay no local taxes — but it is a small step and depends entirely upon the goodwill and ability to pay off the administration of those facilities.

East Stroudsburg has had to buy a fire engine with 100-foot ladder because the present equipment can't safely reach the upper floors of East Stroudsburg State College dormitories. That's just one example of how a state institution can force a municipality to spend money, without any reimbursement.

The legislation signed last week by Gov. Milton Shapp gives ESSC President Dr. Darrell Holmes, for example, the option of paying East Stroudsburg borough for various services. But it is only an option, and while we do not doubt Holmes' goodwill, we certainly doubt his ability to come up with any cash for the borough. He has a hard enough time as it is just running the college with the cut in education funds this year.

In the case of ESSC, there is a trade-off. College students and faculty generate a flow of capital that otherwise would be missing from the local economy. But there's no way to insure that the capital flows predominantly in East Stroudsburg, and tax return for the borough is minimal in any case.

We agree with Borough Manager Donald Gage that legislation to exact a $2 per capita contribution from the state for each student enrolled at ESSC is far better. So is legislation that would place state institutions under local zoning and subdivision codes.

It is only right that a municipality have control over all the areas under its organization. It isn't right to make exceptions because this plot is owned by the state and that is owned by a private citizen.

We urge local legislators to give serious and affirmative consideration to the two pieces of legislation that would return a measure of equity to an inherently inequitable situation.

Decontrol popular

We see that, according to a recent national poll, a majority of people now favor decontrol of oil and natural gas prices.

That's not surprising. Government has had its crack at making sense out of the variable energy price situation and hasn't been markedly successful. The July 4 weekend price raise, for example, was primarily as a result of regulations prohibiting oil companies from passing along cost increases except at stated times.

Besides, many economists have been preaching that the marketplace is a better regulator of price than government for some time. It's about the only approach that hasn't been tried, so perhaps people now feel the marketplace should have its turn.

Maybe there is some truth in the observation by economist Milton Friedman that the best thing about the energy situation is that neither Congress nor the administration has been able to come up with a legislative program. We're eagerly waiting to find out.

"Two what?" snarled the big catcher.
"Yeah, two what?" echoed the equally large batter.

Money Book: Credit pitfalls

(Fourth of 21 columns)

Truth in lending has not eliminated the credit tricksters and racketeers — and the likelihood is no law ever will wipe them out. How, then, can you, the ordinary borrower, protect yourself against the great pitfalls of credit? One very good way is by becoming aware of them — and, by this awareness alone, learning how to avoid these traps.

Debt Pooling: No matter what your plight, avoid commercial debt poolers, who simply lump your debts together, collect one regular payment from you — then charge you as much as 35 per cent of your debts for this "service." The only thing you get is an expansion of your original debt.

Debt adjusting or debt pooling has nothing to do with legitimate credit counseling services — nor should it be confused with legitimate bank or credit union debt consolidation loans. The debt adjuster merely adds to the debtor's problems with excessive charges and makes no effort to offer financial counsel or budget guidance.

Sewer Service: Let's say that you lose your job and subsequently default on an installment payment. Under the law, if a creditor wishes to sue you for payment, he is required to serve you a formal notice of the impending lawsuit.

But let's say you never receive the notice. Even so, the next blow may well be a "default judgment" issued against you, the equivalent of a decision that you, the debtor, are at fault before you consult a lawyer and find out your rights, not to mention go to court.

This is a flagrant attack on your most basic rights. If it happens to you, get a lawyer to move to set the judgment aside. If you can't afford a lawyer, tell the clerk of the court that you want to make a motion to set aside a default judgment for lack of service and ask him for advice on how to file the necessary papers.

Don't take this lying down!

Confession of Judgment: Ranking with the most vicious ways in which debtors are trapped is the "confession of judgment" clause appearing in so many installment sales contracts. In effect this clause is a built-in confession of guilt should the borrower miss a single monthly payment, unless he can come up with the entire amount he still owes. By signing the contract he has waived whatever legal rights he may have had — and the creditor can move in to collect at once. Frequently the first a debtor knows that such a judgment has been made against him is when his property goes up for sale.

Confession of judgment is legal in only a few states, but this technique is still being illegally used to some extent against consumers in many other states as well.

Holder in Due Course: An elderly woman purchased a hearing aid, with a fat down payment and an installment loan for the balance. When the device failed to work, she took it back to the seller, who agreed to send it to the factory for repair. But when she returned to pick it up, she found the seller had gone out of business — and had sold her contract to a local lender.

Incredibly, this woman remained under legal obligation to repay the loan plus stiff interest charges — despite the fact she still had no hearing aid.

This legal quirk — called the "holder in due course" doctrine — is one of the biggest and costliest loopholes on consumer lawbooks. Under it, an unscrupulous used-car dealer or other retailer may lure naive consumers into buying a long list of products or services on time. He will then immediately sell the contract to a finance company.

The product may turn out to be a lemon, or it may be badly damaged, or it may need servicing under the warranty, or it may not even be delivered. And the seller may flatly refuse to replace or repair the product. Nevertheless, the financial institution which owns your loan contract will sternly remind you that it is "in the business of financing, not repairing furniture or cars." If you refuse to make payments as they come due, you may be sued for the remainder of the loan, payable at once. Or, as an alternative, the finance company may repossess not only the item in question but also other personal goods.

Letters to the editor

Evading responsibility?

Editor, The Record:

The article last week concerning the Monroe County Planning and Zoning Commission's adopting a formal grievance policy, stated they were trying to avoid receiving a rash of complaints from irate land development residents.

I was under the impression that the commission's purpose is to serve as a protection of county residents — yet they wish to avoid serving us?

We in Stillwater Lakes, as well as other land development residents, pay our taxes and many of us paying school taxes don't even use the schools. In return for our taxes, we should be able to expect some protection without having to go out and hire a lawyer and engineer to represent our claims to an agency who is supposed to do so.

We receive nothing in return for our tax dollar — no police protection except in cases of gross criminal matters, no sanitation services, no decent roads — nothing. It seems to us that the commission is trying to escape its responsibilities in trying to avoid a rash of complaints instead of making the land developers adhere to the commission's rules and trying to protect the taxpayer.

Panama Canal ripoff

Jeffrey Hart

The secretive approach to diplomacy, so often the trademark of Henry Kissinger, has landed him in another situation that seems certain to blow up in his face. For the past year, secret negotiations have been taking place between the State Department and representatives of the Panamanian government. The State Department apparently has agreed to effective Panamanian control of the Canal and the surrounding Canal Zone. The only thing they are arguing about now is the timing of the transfer.

In pursuing this course, Kissinger's State Department is completely out of touch with both world realities and the political facts in the United States. The U.S. Congress, for one thing, is completely prepared to throw the whole deal right out the window. Any such new treaty would of course require Senate approval, and 38 Senators have already signed a resolution opposing the surrender of any U.S. Canal Zone rights. Only 34 votes would be required to block a new treaty.

Lop-sided vote

According to the Constitution, the House of Representatives must agree to the transfer of any U.S. property or territory. And by a lop-sided 246-164 vote the House is on record as opposed to Kissinger's Panama Canal designs.

Polls show that public opinion favors U.S. retention of the Canal by a 5-1 margin.

The only reason we are negotiating about the Canal at all is that the current Panamanian dictator, General Omar Torrijos, has threatened us with a big student riot if we do not turn it over. Torrijos took power in a coup seven years ago, and he is adept at manipulating Panama's floating population of 24,000 students. Again and again in recent months, Torrijos has hinted in interviews that he is having great difficulty in restraining this mob of scholars, who, he says, would hurl themselves against the Canal Zone but for his calming influence.

As might be expected, Panama's claims receive much Third World rhetorical support, plus the support of our partner in detente.

In fact, the arguments against turning the Canal over to Panama seem pretty convincing.

If Torrijos gained control of the Canal tomorrow, his first act would undoubtedly be to jack up the rates. He might also be expected to play Third World politics with this international waterway. But that would only be the beginning. As Torrijos' rise to power demonstrates, Panamanian politics is inherently unstable. That student mob can be manipulated by others as well as by Torrijos — manipulated by a pro-Soviet or pro-Cuban politician should Torrijos himself prove uncooperative. It is not at all difficult to foresee a Communist veto over use of the Canal, or even Communist control of it.

Predictably enough, the liberal media are all in favor of turning the Canal and the Zone over to Panama. After being thrown out of Southeast Asia by General Giap, what could be more delightful than being thrown out of the Canal Zone by Torrijos' student mob? And of course the word "imperialism" is very much in the foreground.

But if the Canal Zone is an example of imperialism, then so is Alaska. The U.S. purchased both in legal transactions. We have invested a total of $7 billion in the Canal Zone operation. Nor, in the Zone, do we preside over a "native" population — as is the usual practice in a "colony." The population of the Zone is predominantly American. True enough, the Zone borders on Panamanian territory, but that scarcely supports Torrijos' claims. Canada, after all, borders on Alaska. A Canadian claim based on that fact would be dismissed as ridiculous.

It is sometimes asserted that the Canal locks and the dam at Gatun are vulnerable to guerrilla attacks. But it would hardly require the military genius of a Klausewitz or a Napoleon to surround them with enough hardware to ensure their safety. Knocking out the Canal, moreover, would knock out Panama — which currently enjoys the fourth highest per capita income in Latin America because of the take from the Canal.

Hollow threats

Both Secretary Kissinger and chief negotiator Ellsworth Bunker have been hinting that we might face "another Vietnam" in Panama. Since Panama has a population of only 1.6 million people, such alarms are a bit hard to take. General Torrijos, on a recent visit to Mexico, appealed to the example of Ho Chi Minh when discussing his plans if he does not get the Canal, and soon. But given the resources actually available to him, such threats seem singularly hollow.

By saying no, firmly, to the Panamanian presumptions the U.S. would give a clear signal to Third World demagogues that the party is over. The U.S. has its own self-interest to consider, not to mention the continued freedom of this international waterway.

In terms of domestic politics, Kissinger has handed the Ford Administration another enormous stinkbomb, worse this time than the one he constructed in the Solzhenitsyn affair. Kissinger seems to have very little sense of American public opinion, or of the requirements of democratic politics. The Canal could easily become a hot issue in the 1976 Presidential election, and Ford can do himself no good at all by espousing the Kissinger turnover of that U.S. property.

Baltic envoys anguished

Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — A small omission by President Ford before he departed for Helsinki struck anguish in the hearts of a few aging diplomats in one of Washington's forgotten corners.

The advance text of the President's departing statement carried this passage: "The United States has never recognized the Soviet incorporation of Lithuania, Lativa and Estonia and is not going to do so in Helsinki."

But when it came time to say the words, Ford left them out. The omission caused deep gloom in the musty old mansions which house the Lithuanian and Latvian legations on Embassy Row.

The document President Ford signed in Helsinki, in effect, accepts the European borders as they existed at the end of World War II. This leaves Russia in permanent possession of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, which Soviet troops occupied in the spring of 1940.

The State Department insists the Helsinki agreement does no such thing. It "will in no way alter the existing U.S. position on the Baltic question," said Assistant State Secretary Arthur Hartman. And a White House spokesman declared that the President still stood by his deleted remarks about the Baltic states.

But the million Americans of Baltic blood have reason to fear the worst. The time is approaching, many suspect, when the fiction of an independent Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia will end. Their 35-year-old dream of returning to a free homeland, they fear, is about to fade away.

For Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, in his relentless pursuit of detente, is unsympathetic to their cause. The only reason the State Department still pays lip service to Baltic independence is to placate the vocal Baltic-American community.

Nowhere is the pathos of this situation more evident than in those gloomy mansions where the last vestiges of the legitimate Baltic governments are wasting away. Legations representing the three nations have been financed since 1940 with Baltic government assets, which the United States froze after the Soviet takeover.

In the sparse old mansions, the fading diplomats try to cover up the gnawing ache by reassuring one another that Gerald Ford won't let them down.

We spoke with the Lithuanian charge d'affaires, a kindly, Old World gentleman dressed in an immaculate but cheap blue suit. He led us through dark hallways, turning on lights as we walked, to a sparsely furnished drawing room "where it's cooler."

An aide, the only other accredited diplomat in the mission, pulled thick, velvet drapes across the drawing room doorway. We were seated on an ancient, pink divan and offered a glass of Boone's Farm Apple Wine.

Above the cold fireplace, in a simple, wooden frame, was a rosary made of bread crumbs by a Lithuanian in a Siberian labor camp. On a small table were proud photographs of the charge d'affaires in the company of Lyndon and Lady Bird Johnson.

The formal conversation began with a toast. "We are optimistic," the old man finally said. "The President and the Department of State have said they won't forget us. Things will remain the same, they say."

We asked about the future of the legation. The old man explained that the State Department would accredit only those diplomats who were serving at the time of the Soviet occupation. "We are old," he said, "and the future representation will be a problem when we begin to disappear."

As we walked down the curved driveway past an old Oldsmobile, we heard someone call. We turned and saw the gray-haired wife of the charge d'affaires on a third-floor balcony, waving her handkerchief.

"Goodbye," she said. "Goodbye."

Prayers, birds of peace mark Hiroshima bombing

HIROSHIMA, Japan (UPI) — With prayers and the symbolic release of birds of peace, Japan Wednesday marked the 30th anniversary of the U.S. atomic bombing of Hiroshima, the day that extended the nuclear age to weapons and gave death a new form.

One youth climbed a bomb-gutted building in Hiroshima to register his own protest and another briefly interrupted Mayor Takeshi Araki's speech.

Araki opened the nationally televised memorial ceremonies in Hiroshima's Peace Park at 8 a.m., the time 30 years ago the bomb exploded, killing 78,000 persons by U.S. count and 200,000 by Japanese figures.

"... In the midst of raging flames, people lay dying, desperately pleading for help," Araki said.

"In the streets people collapsed and died; in the rivers bodies drifted, floating and sinking; and a ragged and bloody procession wandered blindly, seeking safety 'away from the mad and frantic streets, while voices begged 'water, water' as they weakened and neared death...."

As the mayor started his speech, a man in the 15th row stood up, shouted "Hey, you," and started to move foward.

He got to within 30 feet of Araki before security guards in the audience of 40,000 stopped him and took him away for questioning.

Earlier in the day, a helmeted young man climbed the blackened skeleton of the former Industrial Exhibition Building adjacent to the Peace Park and shouted, "Stop the Emperor's visit to America," referring to the scheduled October state visit to Washington by Emperor Hirohito.

The man remained atop the gutted building, burned during the A-bomb explosion but left standing as a reminder of the holocaust, until police dragged him away after more than an hour.

Police said both men belonged to a splinter left-wing group called "Bomb Victims Youth League," founded in 1971 by children of Hiroshima bomb victims.

The ceremony in Hiroshima took place only a few hours after Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Miki visited Arlington National Cemetery near Washington to pay his respects to America's military dead.

Before the speech a Buddhist temple bell tolled mournfully seven times and 1,700 doves were released into the air, symbols of Hiroshima's hope for peace.

Saturday the city of Nagasaki on Japan's southern island of Kyushu marks the 30th anniversary of its atomic bombing by the United States.

The 30th anniversary of the bombing of Hiroshima was also marked by:

— North Vietnam's denunciation of the attack, in a commentary in the Hanoi newspaper Nhan Dan, as "an abominable crime" and its g that Japanese "reactionaries" were "plotting to revive militarism to regain leadership in Asia." The commentary was also broadcast and monitored in Hong Kong.

— A plea by a South Korean private organization, the Association of Atomic Bomb Victims, to the Japanese government to give financial aid to about 30,000 disabled Korean sufferers of the bombing. Japan occupied Korea during the war and the injued were used as laborers in Japan.

Congress scatters all over on long August recess

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The long and oft-criticized August recess has arrived and Congress has scattered from Peking to the Atlantic Ocean floor — with one congressman just going home to serve hash at a diner in his district.

Two of the most prominent members — Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield and his GOP counterpart Hugh Scott — have simply disappeared.

Many senators and House memdbers are taking advantage of so-called fact-finding trips to tour the globe at taxpayer's expense —generally with their spouses at their side.

The in-trips this season are to the Soviet Union, which will host more than 20 members led by Speaker Carl Albert, and China, which will be receiving at least 13.

The most unusual trips are undoubtedly those selected by Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Ark., and Rep. Ken Hechler, D-W. Va.

Hechler is spending time doing odd jobs in his West Virginia district, starting by waiting on tables on the 5:30 a.m. shift. He has offered to do just about anything else, for free, short of working in the coal mines where he fears his lack of experience would be a safety hazard.

Weicker and Alexander are spending three days in a research capsule on the ocean floor off the Bahamas to get a first-hand look at aquatic research. One of the first things Weicker said he got a look at while swimming outside the capsule was a barracuda.

Mansfield is touring several foreign countries on official government business, but his administrative assistant, Peggy DeMichele, said she didn't know where. "If I need him, I'll just have to call through the State Department," she said.

Congressman slings hash during vacation

WILLIAMSON, W. Va. (UPI) — "It can really get busy but it's a lot of fun," Congressman Ken Hechler said Wednesday as he waited on tables and encountered at least one customer who thought his service was too slow.

"One man from Pennsylvania, right at the busiest time, wanted to send me up the river for slow service," said the West Virginia Democrat, who's working at odd jobs during the August congressional recess.

"I told him it involved some delicate negotiations with the cook. You can only push the cook so far."

Hechler, a 60-year-old bachelor, showed up for work at 5:30 a.m. at the Lock, Stock and Barrel restaurant and planned to stay on the job until 9:30 p.m.

"We get coffee breaks," he said.

Hechler wore a red checked shirt, striped blue trousers and blue sneakers that "grip real well."

He was working for no pay and turning over his tips to waitresses on his shift.

"I haven't been paying much attention to the tips," he said. "But I think the biggest one came from a group of real pretty nurses."

"It can really get busy, but it's a lot of fun. Sometimes it's difficult when the tables are filled to get the coffee out and the orders straight. But the people are friendly and I'm having a good time."

Sculpture still flying around

JEFFERSON, N.H. (UPI) — The Air Force has threatened to shoot it down and it may be the first work of harmonica art ever to solo across the Atlantic. But artist Pastor Martelino Jr., just hopes his flying musical sculpture doesn't crack someone's head.

Martelino's work, appropriately called "Airbourne Won," got away from him last Saturday at the White Mountain Art Festival and hasn't been seen since.

Martelino, a professor of sculpture at Franconia College, said he contacted Pease AFB and they "told me if they felt it was a danger, they would scramble and shoot it down."

The 15-foot, 30-pound aluminum structure attached to a 55-foot helium balloon, is designed with scoops to guide air through a series of harmonicas.

"It could be a hell of a traveling exhibit. It may be the first sculpture to solo across the Atlantic," added Martelino, who spent six months and $600 riveting together the sculpture and making the black, polyethylene balloon.

"It was quite a long and heavy investment," he said. "It's list price is $2,000."

President signs extension of voting rights measure

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford Wednesday signed a seven-year extension of the voting rights act which in the past decade has enfranchised more than a million blacks in southern states.

Ford signed the extension during a brief ceremony in the White House Rose Garden exactly 10 years after President Lyndon B. Johnson signed the original act.

Ford said "the right to vote is at the very foundation of our American system and nothing must interfere with this very precious right.

"In the past decade the voting rights of millions and millions of Americans have been protected and our system of government has been strengthened immeasurably," Ford added. "There must be no question whatsoever about the right of each eligible American to participate in our electoral process."

In addition to extending the provisions of the act for seven years, the bill substantially broadens the law by permanently prohibiting literacy tests and by bringing Spanish-speaking Americans and other minorities under its coverage.

Aimed at ending voter discrimination against blacks, the law has often been described as the most successfull of the civil rights measures which were enacted during the 1960s.

The law permits federal examiners, registrars and poll watchers to go into areas where blacks are denied the right to register and vote.

And the states of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana, plus parts of other states, must get preclearance from the attorney general for any changes in their election laws.

Health officials battle plague-infested fleas

GALLUP, N.M. (UPI) — Health officials scattered about 450 "dust boxes" near this western New Mexico community Wednesday to kill bubonic plague-infected fleas on small rodents.

A 3-year-old Navajo girl, Charlene Brown, of Rehoboth, died Monday of the bubonic plague—the terrifying "black death" of the Middle Ages—at McKinley General Hospital in Gallup.

New Mexico Environmental Improvement Agency and Indian Health Service teams immediately instituted a program to prevent more humans from contracting the disease, spread by fleas carried on animals.

"We feel like we stand a very good chance of protecting the people in the area," said Jack Womack, chief of Environmental Health Services for the Indian Health Service. "This type of operation has been very successful in the past."

The dust boxes are sections of sewer pipe coated on each end with a flea powder known as Sevin and baited in the center. Small rodents walk through the tube to get the bait and are dusted in the process.

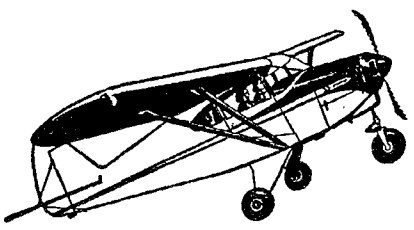

Bryan Miller, chief of the New Mexico Environmental gimprovement Agency Genera Sanitation Division, said his agency had distributed about 300 dust boxes in the vicinity of Red Rocks State Park northeast of Gallup.

Voice of Broadway

By JACK O'BRIAN

NEW YORK — During our summer showbiz reading, we read every page of the aptly titled "George S. Kaufman and his friends" and wallowed in the memories of the Nostalgic Age of Broadway's qualitative era before TV and costs virtually did in the Main Stem. Author Scott Meredith did a yeoman chore of telling more about George Kaufman's friends in some 700 pages than we needed to know; a bit of Kaufman's brilliance for editing down to the delightful essentials would have made it a much better book instead of a verbose drenching in George S. Kaufman and his friends; actually he had far fewer than author Meredith in all his idolatrous detail overstated; Kaufman had probably as many as most Broadway characters but not so many as Meredith collected.

The point of this column, not incidentally, is mostly about Max Gordon, producer of many of George Kaufman's plays; in fact, on many of Kaufman's plays, he was co-author, director and investor; that, in Max Gordon's mind, was the one certain way to keep Kaufman in his stable.

Max Gordon was a shrewd producer, who collected a lot of his savvy from Sam H. Harris, the most potent Broadway producer of the period just before Max Gordon moved up to full production. Sam H. Harris possessed great flair, good judgment and the character and personality rarely combined on Broadway, before, during and since. Producers such as Mike Todd and Billy Rose made more noise than esthetic success; both had a gift for self-aggrandizement; they had the lack of getting their names in the newspapers even when they did nothing. But Max Gordon, a full heir to the honesty, decency, dependability and shrewd artistic judgment of a Sam Harris, hardly was a Broadway accident.

Author Meredith (on page 511 of his prolix Kaufman encyclopedia) concluded a few nasty little inaccuracies about Max Gordon. Meredith dismisses Max as less than artistically based; actually, Max was more esthetically rooted than most Broadway producers who bask in their own arty-publicity. Max got into show business early in the century because his brother Cliff Gordon was a "Dutch Comic," a euphemism then for a Jewish comedian; the shift in ethnicity presumably was to distract the country's audiences which also presumably were believed to think less of a performer if billed by a proper Jewish name. Max's name originally was Salpeter, so perhaps Max and Cliff switched to Gordon simply not to suffer trivial japes.

By reviews of the early part of the century, Cliff Gordon was a tastefully potent monologist whose jokes and manner were borrowed, in fact vulgarized by subsequent "Dutch Comics" such as the also euphemistically re-named "Senator Murphy" who attained a certain vaudeville success on the backwash of Cliff Gordon's posthumous reputation.

Max Gordon says he learned the rudiments of theatrical taste from his brother Cliff; certainly Max polished the basics in contact with the giants of the stage to whom he turned intuitively; in fact, like his brother Cliff, Max had an intuitive taste that was almost impeccable. His high standards were plain to see in the authors, directors, creative people generally he collected for all his plays, even his flops; which universally indicated the tasteful roots even if they missed the boxoffice universality of his amazing parade of successes: Max Gordon produced 40 of the most artificially and financially redoubtable hits of his 40 years of Broadway production.

For some strange reason, author Scott Meredith seems to have spoken to a few of Max's enemies: his five-foot Kaufman shelf has Max awash with vulgarities, a cheapskate, friendless; quotes George Jessel in a glib banality; accurately notes many of the jokes Max unconciously seemed to display. But Max simply had a "style" that mixed Broadwayese and the intellectual; he had a gift for reducing everything to showbiz terms.

Ann Landers

Arthritis sufferer

Dear Ann Landers: My sister has a bad case of arthritis. She suffers a lot and has tried everything from cortisone to gold shots.

A friend of hers who also has arthritis told her she obtained wonderful results from acupuncture. Please tell me, does it work or not? —

Wannahelp

Dear Wanna: I'm no doctor but here is what Drs. Mary E. Moore and Stephen Burke of Temple U. School of Medicine said at the June meeting of the Arthritis Foundation:

"In our controlled studies we could find no evidence that acupuncture helps arthritis."

Because of the severe and unrelenting pain, however, arthritis victims are willing to try anything. Most authorities believe that patients who insist they've been helped are hypnotic-suggestible types who want so desperately to get relief that they psych themseives out. Most of them discover after a while that the relief was temporary. They then go back to the conventional treatment which is safer and cheaper.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 18 years old and engaged to a wonderful man of 20. We will be married next year. I love Tommy very much but I have many problems I can't deal with.

Last year I became pregnant. I wanted the baby but Tommy's father insisted on an abortion. To keep peace in the family I agreed. Later, I learned that my pregnancy was twins. I became very depressed and even considered suicide. Slowly I emerged from the depression but whenever I see a pregnant woman I hate her, even though she's a stranger on a bus.

Now my sister-in-law is pregnant and I keep hoping she will lose the baby. How can I get over these ugly feelings? I will do whatever you say. —

Death Wisher

Dear Friend: You need professional help. And before you say I'm copping out, please read the next letter.

Dear Ann Landers: Four years ago I wrote to you about a problem that was plaguing my life. You told me to get professional help. I figured that was your way of saying, "I don't know the answer."

As time went on, the problem became more severe. My marriage was deteriorating and I was getting all sorts of physical symptoms. I swallowed my prejudices six months ago and DID seek professional help. Thanks to God and my therapist, I am finding my way back.

I am writing to tell your readers what professional help is because I'm sure many of them think as I did, that it means paying a psychiatrist $50 an hour.

Your county mental health society can suggest counseling of high quality which is geared to your ability to pay. What's more, these people really care.

Through therapy I learned I was ashamed to admit I couldn't handle any problems that came my way. I also learned I was trying to block out everything that bothered me as if, by ignoring it, it would go away. So, even though I have 20 years of hangups to deal with, I'm thrilled to report I'm making it.

I owe you an apology. What's more, if I had listened to you four years ago I would have been that much further ahead.

Seen The Light

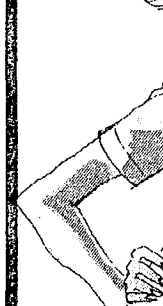

Dear Light: Thanks for turning yourself on. I hope you turn others on, too.

Pest control

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Texas Parks and Wildlife biologists are studying the possibility of using one foreign pest to fight off another. Several Texas waterways have become infested with hydrilla, a fast-growing plant which clogs lakes and prevents boat traffic. The biologists are considering importing white amur, an Asian fish commonly known as grass carp, to eat the hydrilla.

Frightening beauty

BEAUTY: (Q.) I'm good friends with a beautiful girl named Lisa. Every time I see her, she gives me a big smile and hello.

I would like to take her out, but I can't seem to do it. I'm far from afraid to ask a girl out, but in Lisa's case it's different. She's beautiful. I just don't know how to ask her. —

SCARED IN NEW YORK

(A.) Do not let Lisa's beauty intimidate you. Ask her out as you would any other girl. She has given you signs (the smile and the greeting) that she likes you. Go talk to her, either in person or on the telephone, and make some plans with her.

DIRTY WORDS: (Q.) How can adults help teens realize they DON'T have to use profanity in talking to each other? Or put four-letter words into writing? —

A CONCERNED MOTHER IN CONNECTICUT

(A.) My 12-year-old brings home words that have never been spoken in our conversations together. This cannot be prevented, and, in a way, I consider it beneficial because it is a sign of mutual interest and openness between us.

When this happens a parent should not explode in wrath. Instead, the parent should explain calmly that the word is not in good taste either in spoken or written language and is likely to give others a bad impression of the user.

Then the parent can explain what the word means, if that seems to be necessary, and give the boy or girl examples of other, more acceptable words that might be used instead.

We can also set examples by using correct, tasteful language. This does not mean being fancy or fussy. We have thousands of good, simple words (many, many of them four-letter words) that are clear, clean and expressive.

Gold, even wedding rings, flowing from Viet camps

By DONALD P. MYERS
United Press International

Gold, the glittering wealth that has separated the haves from the have-nots since antiquity, is flowing from Vietnamese refugee camps at a rate of more than $40,000 a day.

Some refugees are selling wedding bands off their fingers.

Others have hoards of gold squirreled away in their belongings.

The two firms doing the most business have bought more than $3 million in refugee gold at camps in California, Florida, Arkansas and Pennsylvania. The going price is $193 per tael —three thin gold leafs weighing a total of 1.2 ounces used throughout Southeast Asia.

One firm, U.S. Silver Corp. of Van Nuys, Calif., expects to buy $10 million in refugee gold when the Vietnamese get out of the camps and into American society.

"We expect to buy four or five times more gold then—$10 million would be a safe figure," said Richard Thies, chief economist for U.S. Silver. He said many refugees who fled South Vietnam are rich businessmen with "considerable wealth."

"They do have a lot of gold," he said.

His firm and another, Deak-Perera International, Inc., of New York, have bought $2.3 million in gold alone at the Ft. Indiantown Gap, Pa., refugee camp, according to Army spokesman Lt. Col. Hal Roeder.

A third firm, Manfra, Tordella and Brooks of New York, has bought another $600,000 at one camp alone.

Evan Ecko, branch manager for Deak-Perera at the Pennsylvania camp, said most refugees have sold gold in taels. But some have peddled gold jewelry, particularly wedding bands worth $10 to $50.

"Apparently many of the refugees left Vietnam without money or valuables and their wedding bands are the only things of value they have left to their names," Ecko said.

"We hear rumors all the time that some of the refugees have large amounts of gold they are holding onto. Now that they're in the United States, holding onto the gold and knowing they can get money for it any time makes the refugees feel a little more secure."

U.S. Silver Corp. refuses to buy wedding bands.

"Selling your wedding band is a personal thing and involves a lot of emotion," said Robert Rosebrock of U.S. Silver. "We don't want to participate in that kind of transaction.

"If a person comes in and wants to sell his or her wedding band, it's probably the last thing of value they have. We try to encourage them to hold off and say that things will probably get better for them."

Most of the selling is going on at Camp Pendleton, Calif., and Ft. Chaffee, Ark. Most Vietnamese know what they're doing and the gold market in the refugee camps is competitive.

"There's a price war on and it's very unprofitable for all the companies sitting there," said Luis Vigdor, assistant vice president of Manfra, Tordella and Brooks of New York. "The Vietnamese are very wise. They shop around for the best price."

The refugees also have sold a large quantity of jewels. Thies said the Vietnamese have sold gold at camps in California and Arkansas at the rate of $40,000 a day. Deak-Perera has bought about $120,000 at Eglin Air Force Base in Florida.

The large amount of gold in the camps has not created any security problems. The firms maintain their own guards and transport the gold and money in armed trucks to and from the bases. Military officials said there have been no major incidents of theft.

But military officials and gold firms believe the refugees are holding onto most of their wealth. One says that may mean trouble.

"Most of them say they are going to take it with them when they leave, but I think they're going to have a lot of trouble getting rid of it on the outside," said Dennis Bell of Deak-Perera at Ft. Chaffee. "They'll be able to sell if they go to the East Coast, West Coast or Chicago—major gold centers.

"But can you imagine a refugee trying to sell gold in Iowa? I can almost guarantee they are going to have trouble getting it exchanged in some place like Iowa."

The Green Thumb

Maple 'pimples' no problem

By GEORGE ABRAHAM

MAPLE TROUBLES: If the leaves of your maples or other ornamentals have tiny "pimples" or felty patches of red or yellow on them, don't be too worried about it.

Many ornamentals, especially maples, get the blotches and it's due to a tiny mite that's too small to be seen by the naked eye. The patches seem to be the plant's responses to the presence and-or feeding of the mites.

Actually, these growths do no harm to the leaves or trees, although they do get a lot of people stirred up. Being a mite you'd think that Kelthane (a good mite killer) would knock this pest out, but it doesn't work on it.

Sevin (an insecticide) knocks this pest out, if applied early enough. A dormant spray of lime-sulfur in early spring will also control the spindle mite or others.

However, if you don't want to use chemicals, then forget about it because these blotches caused by the feeding of Eriophyid mites don't do a bit of harm to the tree.

By the way, now's a good time to look over your Japanese Yew shrubs and rhododendrons. If there are holes chewed in the leaves, it's the work of the black vineweevil. Spray the foliage and the area underneath and around the plants with chlordane or Lindane. Diazinon might be helpful. Spectracide is Diazinon, but is for homeowner use. It's good for ants and many lawn and garden insect pests.

GRASS CLIPPINGS: Most lawn mowers now have attachments which catch the grass as you mow it. These clippings make a fine mulch around trees, shrubs and in the vegetable garden.

When you use the clippings as a mulch, the sun soon turns them into hay, and when fall rolls around the material has gone into the soil to make valuable humus. Grass clippings contain a very large percentage of nitrogen, which is a good reason why the mulch is such a good soil-builder.

As a mulch, lawn clippings surpass most others, being easy to handle, will remain in place nicely, and will give your crops a neat appearance. They practically disappear into the soil by fall.

In a compost pile, the grass furnishes heat (due to rapid release of nitrogen as grass decays) and helps "ripen" a compost pile quicker.

Some people prefer to leave the clippings on the lawn where they can feed the grass roots. The average person mows his lawn about 30 to 35 times a season, and he mows about three feet of grass in height.

Endangered

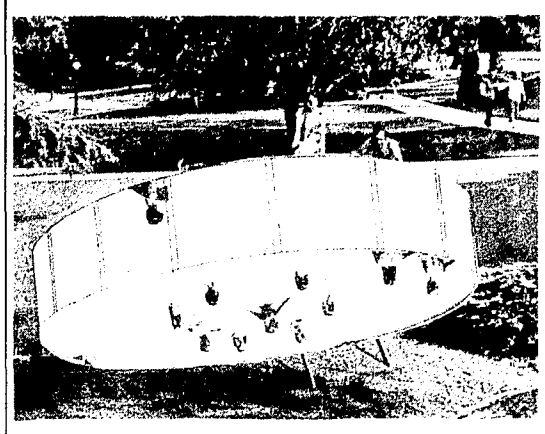

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Ten species of fish and wildlife have been added to the state's list of endangered species by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

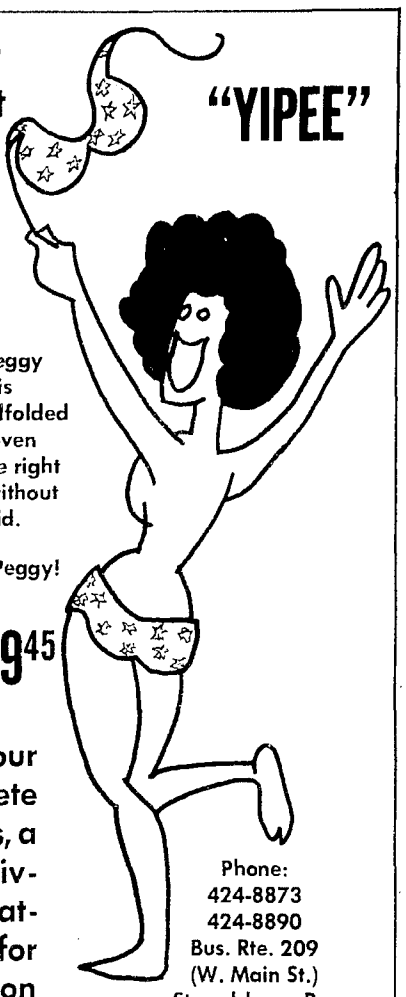

Commissioners said the new endangered species are the blue, finback, right and sperm whales; jaguar, margay, arctic peregrine falcon, Backman's warbler, and hawksbill and leatherback turtles.

No matter what shape your stomach's in, it dances

Classic pose.

Hip roll.

By LORA SHARPE
Family Fare Editor

STROUDSBURG — The basement room is dim and sweltering.

The fan in the rear window swirls at high speed.

It's still 89 degrees.

Heating pipes have only a fragile hold on the cinder block walls.

Inside the back room, 15 women, clad only in diaphanous skirts and minimal bodices, sweat.

They intently watch their gyrating reflections on the wall of mirrors on the clothes closets.

The room reverberates with a cymbal-like clang.

This is a belly dancing class.

Fourteen Beginner II members are following teacher Shehara (Teri Olenick) in the hopefully smooth movements of the dance.

Most of the women in the room are fairly young, but there is a grandmother among them. Most of the women are also fairly trim, but there are a few bulges around the room.

Some of the dancers exhibit a natural grace; most are still a little awkward in the movements.

None of them thought they would ever be able to belly dance.

A year ago, Shehara started one beginning belly dancing class in the Poconos. Now, there are 50 women in four classes at the YMCA, Stroudsburg.

Two area establishments now offering the dance as entertainment on a regular basis. The Club Shehara at the Penn Stroud Hilton Inn has a dancer on Saturday nights; the Stroudsmoor, on Friday nights.

And garish green bumper stickers can be seen around town proclaiming that "Belly dancing with Teri is fun."

Fun was not the reason most of this class began belly dancing. Exercise was the major reason most of the Beginning II class took to veils and Middle Eastern music.

Men played almost no part in the women's decisions. No one in the Beginner II or the Advanced class that followed said that husband or boyfriend had influenced the move to belly dancing.

But only two said they objected to the dance.

The dancers reported that many women are hostile to those who participate in belly dance classes.

"They don't know anything about belly dancing," said Kathy Long. Friends often ask the dancers to exhibit their knowledge — and once women see the dance, they often change their minds.

Dancers say the effects of learning to belly dance are both psychological and physical.

"It gets rid of my frustrations," said Lena Wilson, who explained that she helps run a gas station during the day and keeps both the station books and the house in order.

"It makes you feel — I don't know — sexy," said one older woman.

"You know you can do something most women can't," said Mrs. Long.

A few women said they had lost a substantial amount of weight from the exercise; many said their muscle tone had greatly improved.

All of the women in the Beginner II class had invested more than lesson time and money in the dance. All had made cloud-like skirts, to be worn over bathing suits or more elaborate garments.

All also had zills, tiny cymbals which are strapped to thumb and index finger and accentuate the rhythm of the dance. And everyone had a veil to be peeled off during specific numbers.

The women were enthusiastic about the costumes. "You feel more graceful in them," said one young dancer.

One of the Advanced class members — who dance professionally — had sewn 450 baubles on her costumes by hand.

Why?

"Because I like the dance and want to do it professionally," she said.

The class reported that while material for an elaborate costume — with coin-encased belt and decorated bodice and skirt — might run to $100, the labor involved was priceless.

But what is a belly dancer in jeans?

The costumed class performs with veils.

Courthouse to double as art center

STROUDSBURG — Members of the Monroe County Arts Council hope the beauty and artistry of the Poconos can be seen by strolling through the county courthouse.

The council doesn't plan to offer courses on art for auditors, jazz for judges or piano for prothonotaries, but rather a year-long rotating art exhibit in the courthouse corridors.

According to Grant Terrill, cultural-coordinator for the council, the exhibit would feature works of local artists throughout the year and culminate with a bicentennial art show in the spring.

A water-color show is planned for Aug. 12 through mid-September, a print show from September to November, paintings and work by area art teachers from Thanksgiving to January, a photograph show from mid-February through March and art of school children in a mid-April to June show.

Terrill said a large invitational art show is also planned for November, but the exact location of the show is still not set.

In addition to the art exhibits, the council hopes to hold an arts festival next summer similar to the one held this year.

"Our two-day festival only cost $1,000 this year, mostly paid for by the contributions of patrons, but next year we hope for a bigger affair," he said.

"We are still working on the details, but we would like a Fred Waring concert to be the highlight of the festival next year," Terrill added.

The council is also investigating an "arts in the schools program" that would allow different arts groups to present programs in the school districts.

"Such a program would let students know what people in our area have done in the arts. It would also help them to decide what kind of things they are interested in," Terrill noted.

Terrill said the council attempted to narrow the school program down to one particular art area.

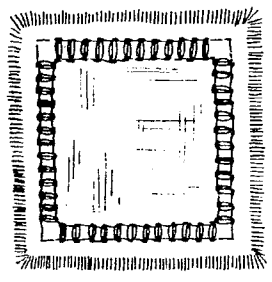

"We would choose one area like theater and in following years expand the program to more than one art type," he said.

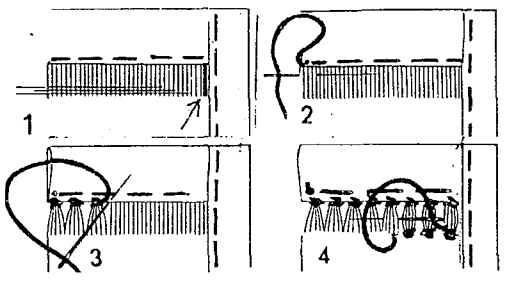

The council is currently preparing a proposal for the Pennsylvania Arts Council to request funding for the arts in the school program.

It is estimated that the cost of the project would be about $1,500. The groups who would produce the shows would be volunteers, Terrill said, but general expenses would be covered in the funding grant.

Other projects under consideration include a concert with the North East Philharmonic Orchestra in cooperation with East Stroudsburg High School and the opening of an art museum that would house a permanent collection of local work.

The art of

Open-work embroidery techniques

By PHYLLIS FIAROTTA

Hemstitching and drawn work are techniques that came from Europe several centuries ago. Hemstitching is a method of sewing a hem and incorporating a decorative border. The border is made by pulling out horizontal threads to form vertical thread bands. The vertical threads are then drawn into neat little groups.

Drawn work, one of the earliest forms of open-work embroidery and the precursor of lace, is an elaborate form of hemstitching.

HEMSTITCHING

1. Choose a moderately loose weave fabric from which threads can be pulled easily. Whether you are making a handkerchief, place mat, runner, or any other item, turn all sides under and hem with a ¼-to ½-inch hem on all sides.

2. Cut one ¾ inch vertical slit (see arow, Fig. 1) where two hemmed sides meet.

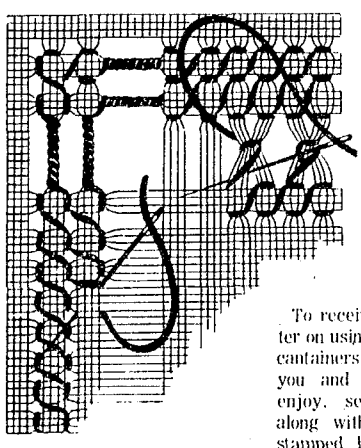

3. Cut a second slit, same size, on the opposite corner.

4. Pull out all horizontal threads between the slits. If you want the border to go all the way around the piece, make pulled thread bands along the other three sides by cutting slits and proceeding as above.

5. Thread a needle with whatever thread you want to use. Gather a group of vertical threads with the needle (Fig. 2) and stitch tightly together close to the hemline at least twice.

6. Move to the next group of threads and gather in the same way (Fig. 3). Complete the gathering around the entire hemline and around any other side from which you have pulled threads.

7. Stitch together the groups at the other end of the shaft. (Fig. 4).

DRAWN WORK

1. Start with a hemstitched item — a handkerchief, doily, or rectangular runner.

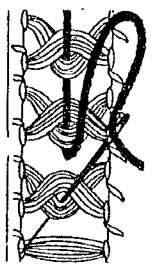

2. The design shown has a second row of hemstitching about ½ inch from the first hemstitched row.

3. A third row of pulled threads, one-inch wide, is formed ½ inch away from the second hemstitched row.

4. Form another hemstitched row ½ inch away from the one-inch row and sew as you did the two bottom rows.

5. The one-inch pulled-thread row is worked after the rows above an below are hemstitched. Gather every two groups of threads at their centers. Sew or knot as you did in the hemstitched areas or use the twist design shown in the insert.

6. Finish corner threads by twisting yarn around them.

Collegiate sea-change

By JUDITH GELBER

Living away from home at a college or university can be a rewarding experience if the student realizes his personality, values and attitudes won't change radically just because he has left the familiar environment of home.

Many young persons have fantasies of becoming someone wholely different once the apron strings tying them to their mother are cut. Parents and friends may also feed this belief in an effort to reassure the youngster and, perhaps, to soothe their own feelings.

For example, the boy who has been painfully shy throughout his adolescence, and the girl who has remained a shrinking violet despite persistent attempts to involve her socially, are not likely to develop into a Don Juan or a belle of the ball once they enter the halls of academe.

There is no fairy godmother standing at the threshhold of the college waving a magic wand and turning young people into their heart's desire. Short, fat, dark-haired people won't turn into tall, willowy blonds (without the help of lots of bleach, a strenuous diet and elevator heels).

Of course, social opportunities abound, especially if a young person from a rural area enters a huge, cosmopolitan university complex. Even comparatively small colleges have their swinging set who like to party and "live it up." And many colleges possess more entertainment and sports facilities than are available at home.

But a youngster's personality doesn't change as quickly and as dramatically as his physical environment changes. The boy who experienced social failures up to and including his June graduation from high school is probably going to have similar problems in September, at college. And the girl who wept into her pillow because of a lack of dates isn't going to find, suddenly, that young men are lining up to take her to football games and dances.

Similarly, young people who defied their parents, broke commonly accepted rules of social behavior, and experimented with drugs and alcohol before leaving home aren't likely to make a sudden shift and become diligent scholars who avoid social, physical and emotional excesses.

This doesn't mean, however, that people in late adolescence are forever doomed to their particular emotional traps. Indeed, the tendency to swing between extremes — to believe that a simple kiss will turn a frog into a prince, or that the present will go on forever unchanged—is one of the worst burdens of the adolescent years.

Going away to college, therefore, should be viewed as an opportunity to experience growth and change, hopefully for the better — in time. And when reality and fantasy fail to coincide, young people should hold on to the nugget of wisdom that has probably done more to sustain parental sanity than anything else: This, too, shall pass!

State forest at issue

Oil battles nature in Michigan

By TERRY O. BROWN
Dow Jones-Ottaway News

GAYLORD, Mich. — Five years ago it would have been difficult to strike up conversations here on the relative merit of oil wells and nature. But in 1970 oil was found on the edge of the Black River Swamp in the southern end of the Pigeon River County State Forest.

Now almost everyone has an opinion, and a lot of people do not want oil wells despite the prospect of millions of dollars in royalties to the state and to some private landholders.

The controversy centers on the natural beauty of this wilderness area and particularly of the Pigeon River Forest, northeast of here.

Several energy-producing companies — mainly Shell Oil Co., Standard Oil Co. (Indiana) and Consumers Power Co., an electric and gas utility based in Jackson, Mich. — want to develop the oil and gas that geologists are certain lie beneath much of the forest. Environmentalists and some state agencies are blocking the way.

The companies leased the mineral rights to most of the land, 90 per cent of which is owned by the state. In 1968, Five productive wells were drilled by Shell soon after the 1970 discovery (they are still producing), but environmentalists started protesting, and the state — the same state that had done most of the leasing to the companies — declared a moratorium on further drilling in the forest. That was in late 1970.

The moratorium was lifted in mid-1971, but later the state denied a drilling permit to one oil company and said it would not issue others on any state land in the forest (a few wells have since been drilled there on private acreage).

Meanwhile, the companies are growing impatient. After the companies had worked out a plan to extract the oil and gas through a minimum number of wells and presented it to the state in January, state officials essentially scrapped that proposal this summer in favor of coming up with a plan of their own.

Although irked, the oil companies say they will continue to refrain from seeking any drilling permits until they see the state plan.

"It's a little like paying a farmer $25 for the right to fish on his property and later he says you cannot put your line in the water," says one frustrated oilman.

Most of the leases expire in 1978. "We can always extend them," says Howard Tanner, director of the State Department of Natural Resources.

Conservationists contend that any further encroachment by the industry would be disastrous. "A little oil development here would be like being a little pregnant," says Jack Hood, a leader of the anti-oil forces and director of the Interlochen Academy of Arts.

"When we straighten out our national energy priorities and quit wasting so much, then come to me and ask for the oil. In the meantime, why do we have to put the almighty dollar before the solitude of the forest?" Hood asks.

The stakes in the confrontation are high. The outcome could affect not only oil's future in northern Michigan, but also the way in which environmentally sensitive areas in other states are treated as the widening search for new sources of hydrocarbon fuels spills over into previously untouched regions.

In addition, the struggle imposes the question of whether a state, after selling the mineral rights to its land — the companies have paid the state $1 million for these rights — can then bar drilling on the grounds of unnecessary environmental damage.

Although tiny by Alaskan-Slope standards, drilling activity in this state has risen steadily in the last five years. Last year, Michigan produced 17.5 million barrels of oil, only a day's supply for the nation but up 25 per cent from 1973 output.

The attraction for the oil companies is that much of the oil in northern Michigan lies in easily located and relatively shallow reservoirs no larger than a few hundred acres. Thus, the chances of sinking productive wells once oil is detected are much higher here than elsewhere in the country.

The state, which now imports more than 90 per cent of its energy needs, also stands to gain immensely from oil and gas development. At a time when Michigan faces budget pressures, and unemployment problems, its royalites in the Pigeon River Forest alone could mean a $190 million windfall. And private land owners in this area could collect another $20 million.

A-bomb birthplace changing

By GAIL NEVINS

It was 30 years ago yesterday that an American aircraft named the "Enola Gay" dropped a piece of metal over the Japanese city of Hiroshima, vaporizing people and structures and changing forever the world as we knew it.

That first atomic bomb used actively in warfare was the immediate descendent of the first atomic bomb successfully exploded just 21 days before, on July 16, 1945, at the secret and remote government laboratory in Los Alamos, New Mexico.

The historic occasion transpired on a desert named "Journey of Death" by Spanish explorers centuries before whose wildest imaginings could not have foreseen the world's first fission bomb.

Ironically, there is scarcely a more serene spot that could have been chosen to develop the weaponry that would terrorize adults and children alike in the years to come.

The remote northern New Mexican plateau bears the Spanish name Pajarito ("Little Bird" in English) while the city of Los Alamos translates into Poplar Trees — hardly a harbinger of future events.

The super-secret activities of that place 30 years ago and even since that time have traveled different directions into the present; not that Los Alamos has become a retreat center negating the accessories of war — but its current push away from secrecy and weapons is the strongest in its history.

The Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory, the institutional heir of the "secret base in New Mexico," was taken from the administration of the Atomic Energy Commission this year and given to the new Energy Research and Development Administration, allegedly not interested in military goals or practices.

According to William K. Stuckey, former editor of Reports on Search at MIT, the lab's new director, Harold Agnew has expanded its efforts.

Less than half of its $150 million budget this year is earmarked for weapons design and Agnew has pressed for research into a varied exotic energy-producing projects and undirected basic scientific studies.

It's major non-weapons installations include an accelerator which produces the world's richest and most intense beam of the principal binding particle of the atomic nucleus, the meson (which among other things, is being explored as a cancer treatment tool which could literally explode cancer cells without damaging surrounding healthy tissue).

Los Alamos has also made advancements in nuclear reactor design.

Parade of dolls on Friday

STROUDSBURG — The Stroudsburg Playground's Annual Doll Parade scheduled for yesterday, will take place at 2 p.m. Friday.

Winners will receive ribbons in nine categories but contestants should enter only one category.

The categories for the parade are: Largest family; largest doll; smallest doll; funniest doll; most unusual doll; prettiest doll; prettiest bride doll; storybook doll; and prettiest float.

In a table tennis tournament conducted at the playground recently, four winners were named:

Julie Ludwig won in the girls' junior division and Vickey Van Dyne won the senior division. In the boys' competition, Tim Fuhrer won the younger group and Scott Lockley topped the senior division.

Park prizes awarded in E-burg

EAST STROUDSBURG — The Dansbury Park in East Stroudsburg recently held tournament week for contests in tetherball, shuffleboard, horse shoes and checkers.

In tetherball, the 12 and under competition was won by Kulu Hicks over Albert Gilliland and Joe Davis defeated Mary "Hester" Tyson for the 13 and over category.

In horse shoe pitching, it was a two-and-a-half-hour battle for Donna Cramer to take the championship over Hester Tyson in 13 and older while Leon Van Horn won in the junior division.

Gene Roberts jumped into first for 7-8 year olds in the checkers tournament; Matt Machtay won 11-12 year-old competition and Mike Crement took first in the 12-13 category.

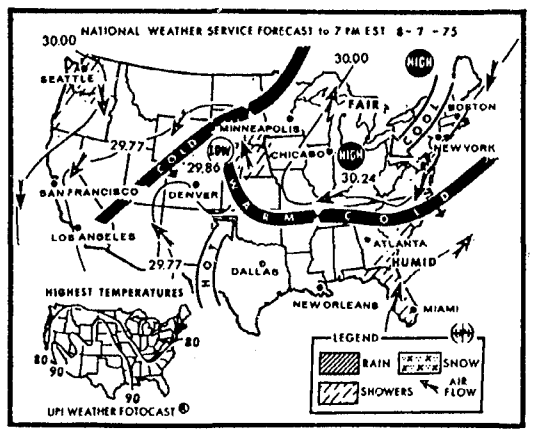

Mike Roberts shuffled his way to top place in shuffle board, 12 and under, and Jim Rode captured honors in the senior division.

Delaware Valley Fair becomes big attraction

MILFORD — It started in 1925 as a small, one-day event in the lobby of the Pike County Courthouse with exhibits of corn, potatoes and a few jars of can goods.

Now, the Delaware Valley Fair and Farm Show is a three day fair with booths, exhibits and entertainment that attracts participants throughout the Tri-State area.

"It's really still a small family fair," noted Cynthia Van Lierde, show chairman.

"The show doesn't have any honky-tonk because we never wanted it," she added.

Mrs. Van Lierde has been associated with the fair since 1947 and noted this year over 300 schedules have been sent out to promote the annual event.

Last year, over $700 in premiums were paid to exhibitors, but this year it is expected the number of premiums awarded will increase.

"We got $2,000 from the Pennsylvania Fair Fund, but half of the premiums we pay ourselves. Every year we just about break even," she said.

The Raymondskill Valley Grange with 52 members has sponsored the fair for many years and expanded it into a three-day fair in 1947. This year the fair will be held Aug. 14, 15 and 16 at the Raymondskill Valley Grange.

Two floors of the grange hall will be cleared for flower, food, handicraft and sewing exhibits. In addition to smaller prizes ranging from 50 cents to $5, there will be five prizes of $10 in each of the major divisions of the fair.

The winners of the $10 premiums must accumulate the greatest number of points in the agricultural, flower, handwork, sewing and food divisions.

All exhibits must be entered at the fair between 11 a.m. and 9 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 14. Judging will start 9:30 a.m. Friday, but the public will not be admitted. Premiums will be paid on Saturday.

John Withrow, Monroe County agent, will serve as the judge of the vegetable and fruit exhibits, while Ernest Shimp, youth agent, will judge 4-H entries and exhibits by juveniles.

Other exhibits at the fair this year will include a one-room school house by the Pike County Historical Society and a booth by the Pike County Bicentennial Committee.

Delaware Valley School District Community College, the Milford Community Club, St. Francis Hospital Auxiliary and the Delaware Valley Assn. of MIA's will all have booths at the fair.

Entertainment at the fair will include the Tri-State String Band 7:30 p.m. Friday with Phil Judd as conductor.

Saturday's entertainment will begin at 1:30 p.m. with a parade of dogs, a dog obedience show, the Equestrian Drill Team from Camp Netimus in Dingman Township and a car rescue demonstration by the Milford Fire Dept. Rescue Squad.

An antique flea market will also be open each day on the fairgrounds.

Dr. David G. Fox has become an associate of Dr. Sidney Cohen, dentist, of 606 Ann St., Stroudsburg. Fox is a graduate of Villanova University and Temple Dental School and is licensed to practice dentistry in Pennsylvania. He is a member of the American Dental Assn. He and his wife, Carol, live in Stroudsburg.

For the Record

It was incorrectly reported in Tuesday's newspaper that a motion was carried by Greene Township Supervisors to have all correspondence first approved by the board before mailed by Terry Mulrooney, township secretary. The motion was made by Supervisor John Price, but died due to the lack of a second.

SAYLORSBURG — A benefit Penn Jersey horse show will be held on Sunday, Aug. 10 at Royal Crest Farm stables in Saylorsburg. The show is open to the public.

Elderly get break from area druggist

BRODHEADSVILLE — For retirees in the West End who are living on fixed incomes, inflation may be tough to beat, but thanks to the concern of a local Brodheadsville pharmacy, prescription medicine might be one item the elderly won't have to do without here in the future.

Under a new program being instituted at Stafford's Pharmacy in the Monroe Plaza Shopping Center in Brodheadsville, owner Kern Stafford is making a 10 per cent discount available on prescription medicines for all residents 60 and older.

Absorbing the loss himself, is no minor item considering the highest mark-up on drugs is only 30 per cent, according to the local pharmacist. Stafford says he began the program to make sure local retirees could and would take needed medications.

"I started the program because of the rising cost of medicine and my concern for our elderly customers," explained Stafford, who said more than half of his customers are over 60. "I would rather take a 10 per cent loss and see people have the medication they might be tempted to go without."

Saying that the cost of his medications were in line with the prices of medications at other area pharmacies, Stafford said other drugs have not been marked up for residents under 60 to make up for the difference in profits.

In order to enroll in the program, which has been tagged as Stafford Drug's Senior Saver's Plan, residents simply fill out a standard application at the store listing their name, address, birthday, and Social Security number. The application is signed and dated and contains space for a husband and wife's information on the same sheet.

When the application is accepted, the resident is presented with a Stafford Pharmacy green senior saver wallet sized card, that must be presented with future prescriptions to receive the discount.

The discount is only made available for prescription drugs and the card can only be used by the person authorized to use it.

Some selected Walgreen Agency items, which are carried by the store are also eligible for a discount under the special plan.

The loss of cards should be reported promptly to the pharmacy.

MHMR program grows

Group home to open

STROUDSBURG — State, regional and local officials of the Mental Health Mental Retardation program gathered Tuesday and Wednesday in Stroudsburg to discuss the development of community living arrangements for the mentally retarded.

One of the programs under the state Department of Public Welfare, the community living arrangements project in the Monroe-Carbon-Pike region has grown over the past two years to encompass two group homes, four apartments and placement of the mentally retarded with families in the community.

Operating on roughly a $200,000 annual budget, the MHMR program for Carbon-Monroe-Pike has a short-term training home in Kresgeville with six retarded adults, a long-term sheltered home in Weatherly, Carbon County, seven persons placed in apartments with minimal supervision and two others placed with families in Monroe County.

In addition, the MHMR program expects to open another group home in Stroudsburg this month, according to Mrs. Janice Joseph, community living arrangements coordinator.

Mrs. Joseph described the state program's ultimate goal as being one of placing mentally retarded citizens in communities to normalize their lives — a turn away from institutional living for the mentally retarded.

She said the two-day workshop sponsored by the tri-county MHMR represented the first time state, regional, county and local professionals have gathered to discuss the mechanics of the program and exchange ideas and project goals.

"The purpose of the forum was to provide communication for the state, regional and county people about the program and discuss details and guidelines," Mrs. Joseph said.

She said some 25 persons attended the sessions, including Mel Knowlton, state director of the bureau of community residential programs and Joseph Bilbow, regional representative for the program.

MHMR administrator Thomas Foley, residential advisors and project directors also joined the session.

Mrs. Joseph said a report on the state-wide program during the session included statistics showing Pennsylvania now has 100 group homes, 200 apartment units and about 200 persons placed with private families under a community living arrangements program serving nearly 1,600 persons on annual budget of roughly $11 million.

Other issues receiving attention included zoning problems, budgeting and a five-year outlook for the program.

Master degree received

STROUDSBURG — Brenda Bolcar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Graydon Bolcar of Stroudsburg, has graduated from Marywood College, Scranton, with a master of science degree in reading education.

Miss Bolcar is pursuing graduate studies at the University of Scranton, where she is working on a degree in elementary administration.

She is currently employed by the Palmerton Area School District as a third grade teacher.

Student cited

STROUDSBURG — Charles E. Starner, Stroudsburg R.D. 2, an engineering student on the Hazleton campus of the Pennsylvania State University, has been awarded a certificate for superior academic achievement during the spring 1975 term.

Waring concert scheduled

EAST STROUDSBURG — Over 200 youths from the Fred Waring Music Workshop will present a concert at 8:30 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 14 at Shawnee Inn, Shawnee.

Having rehearsed together for only 10 days, high school and college singers have put together songs that paint a musical story of some of the "Freedoms" in America.

Some of the local students who will be participating in the program include: Linda Post, Pocono Mountain High School; Teresa Falisi, Stroudsburg; Margaret Davis, Mount Pocono; Lisa Murphy, Saylorsburg; Melissa Knierim, East Stroudsburg; Doreen Derr, East Stroudsburg; Diane Smith, Kunkletown; Terrie Murphy, Kunkletown; Alan Ford, Stroudsburg and Susan Becker, Stroudsburg.

The Waring Workshop in association with East Stroudsburg State College holds two outdoor youth concerts each summer.

Students are coached and guided in all the aspects of presenting choral music.

Study is concentrated in the areas of repertory, arranging, conducting, staging, lighting, sound and recording techniques.

Tickets for Thursday's concert are available at Wyckoff's Gift Wrap, Mainline Music and room 105, Stroud Hall, ESSC.

Scales of district justice off balance?

By STEVE DRACHLER
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — Equality under the law apparently does not extend to district justices in Monroe County, according to a state report outlining their workloads for the final six months of 1974.

Pennsylvania's district magistrates serve as the first level of courts. Elected, they handle traffic citations, non-traffic citations, summary complaints and small civil matters. Magistrates handle criminal arraignments and conduct hearings to determine if a case warrants grand jury action.

The report, compiled by the Administrative Office of Pennsylvania Courts, shows the eight county district magistrates handle varying portions of all types of cases.

For example, District Magistrate Eleanor K. Randolph, whose district includes the Borough of East Stroudsburg, processed 135 misdemeanor and felony complaints during the final six months of 1974.

Magistrate Jean Davis, whose district includes the borough of Delaware Water Gap, Smithfield and Middle Smithfield Townships, handled only two misdemeanor and felony cases during the same period of time.

Most comparisons between the magistrates are not so pronounced, with some workloads padded by traffic cases due to interstate highways knifing districts.

Magistrate Gerald Canfield (Pocono, Jackson and Hamilton Townships) processed 2,322 traffic citations during the six months period. Magistrate Clara Pope (Mount Pocono, Tunkhannock, Tobyhanna and Coolbaugh Townships) handled 2,243.

But, on the other end of the spectrum, Magistrate Glenn Borger (Ross, Eldred, Chestnuthill and Polk Townships) processed 168 traffic citations.

The difference in work, Canfield said, is due to the volume of traffic through the districts. State law requires police agencies to file traffic complaints with the district in which the violation occurred.

However, criminal cases, both for summary violations, misdemeanors and felonies are not required to be filed in the district where the offense is committed.

This regulation leads to "judge-shopping," according to Jon Vipond, legal counsel for the court administration office.

Judge-shopping occurs when police bypass the magistrate in whose district a violation occurs in favor of one who acts favorably in the law enforcement officer's cases, according to Vipond.

"Judge-shopping is not square with due process of law," Vipond said Wednesday. "That is why we are doing studies now — to get much more accurate reporting across the state and plug up holes and find reasons for disparities that show up."

Sgt. Emil Weber, non-commissioned officer in charge of Troop N, state police at Swiftwater, said Wednesday he is not aware of judge-shopping in Monroe County.

"They (the magistrates) all have different office hours. You go to the one you can find. On weekends, with two on duty, we go to the one that is closest."

Mrs. Randolph said she does not know why she handles the bulk of criminal and summary cases filed with the county's eight magistrates.

"I don't know. You would have to talk to the police about it," she said.

"I have tried to make myself readily available 24 hours a day and try to be fair," she added.

Mrs. Davis, whose summary and criminal totals are lowest of the eight, is away on vacation and could not be reached for comment.

According to Weber, magistrates' workload is also effected by their office hours. Under the system set up by Monroe County Common Pleas Court President Judge Arlington Williams, the magistrates working schedules are varied.

Canfield, Mrs. Pope and Mrs. Randolph work during the day, as does Magistrate Marjorie Shumaker (Barrett, Paradise and Price Townships). Stroudsburg Magistrate Graden Praetorius works late afternoons and evenings, along with Mrs. Davis. Borger works noon until 6 p.m. and Magistrate Earl Ammerman (Stroud Township) has evening and overnight hours.

Vipond said the report is the first formal evaluation ever made of the courts of initial jurisdiction. He said more studies, using more sophisticated methods of study, will be made in the future.

Caseload breakdown

Cases filed before Monroe magistrates

	Traffic	Non-Traffic	Summary	Felony and Misdemeanor	Civil
Praetorius	319	343	151	45	134
Randolph	345	49	213	135	83
Pope	2,243	140	54	52	74
Ammerman	327	153	14	72	42
Canfield	2,322	18	31	33	58
Borger	168	22	32	22	81
Davis	414	18	4	2	32
Shumaker	197	63	57	28	39

The above statistics represent a compilation of reports covering the last six months of 1974 and were taken from a report prepared by the Administrative Office of Pennsylvania Court, Philadelphia.

The eight magisterial districts also have varying populations. Magistrates are paid a base salary of $6,000 a year and a supplemental 40 cents per person, based on the 1970 census.

Magistrates and their salaries, with populations in parentheses are: Praetorius $8,180 (5,451); Randolph $9,157.60 (7,894); Pope $7,932 (4,830); Ammerman $9,010 (7,525); Canfield $8,426 (6,067); Davis $7,730.40 (4,326); Shumaker $7,614.40 (4,036); Borger $8,117.20 (5,293).

Developer vows to correct Pocono Haven problems

By BRUCE POSTEN
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — A Pocono land developer indicted Tuesday for selling land on false promises said Wednesday he would make improvements to his Pocono Haven subdivision in Tannersville, Pocono Township.

Communicating through the Stroudsburg law office of Phillip H. Williams, the developer, Richard Feinberg of Somerset, N.J., stated that it is his intention to make improvements that have been discussed with township officials.

Mentioned among the items Feinberg will complete were a clubhouse, lakes, a swimming pool and a bridge over Bulgers Run Creek capable of supporting emergency vehicles.

When asked about other items mentioned in an indictment of the developer, attorney Ron Vican of Williams' office said it was Feinberg's "general statement that he plans to live up to the agreements and improvements he had promised."

Vican also added that Feinberg expects to continue to sell land and operate Pocono Haven with the approval of Pocono Township officials. He said the criminal indictment for mail and land sales fraud should not affect the operation of the development.

However, Pocono Township Supervisor Paul Frailey said a ban placed on the sale of lots in Pocono Haven will still remain in effect.

"He (Feinberg) hasn't met with us in close to a month. He still needs a township permit for a bridge and dam," Frailey said.

Supervisors had blocked land sales last January after learning that a discrepancy existed between an approved map of the development and a revised map used to sell lots.

Detleff Hansen, township solicitor, said the revised map showed an expanded lake and the elimination of several lots.

Stuart Pipher, chairman of the township planning commission, said Feinberg submitted a revised map to the commission for approval, but was ordered to make several corrections on the map involving right-of-ways and slopes of development roads.

"He was supposed to make the corrections, but he hasn't met with us since that time," Pipher said.

Feinberg is also prohibited from selling lots until he applies for a bridge and dam permit.

"Several meetings ago, Feinberg's attorney (Williams) informed supervisors that the developer was getting the necessary clearance for construction of a bridge from the Department of Environmental Resources (DER)," Hansen said.

DER to test sewerage

STROUDSBURG — The effectiveness and efficiency of the Stroudsburg sewage treatment plant will be subjected to four kinds of biological and chemical tests ordered by the state Department of Environmental Resources (DER).

Borough Manager Ralph Bender reported the testing would put the borough in a better position to judge the necessity of joining a regional sewage treatment system, as proposed by the General Authority of Monroe County.

Prior to the DER order, the borough did relatively little testing of any kind, according to Bender.

In related discussion, Bender read a letter from the General Authority responding to comments made by the borough at a public hearing on the regional sewage facilities plan.

The letter said the economic data requested would be supplied in a final draft of the report and that no endorsement of any plan by Stroudsburg was required.

Mayor Warren Loney said "We give them lots of input, but we never get any output from them."

In other business, council decided there was no illegality in the beautification committee putting up planters on the sidewalks. They said it was a matter of interpretation of the ordinance.

Joint codes enforcement officer Stanley Melvin had raised the question of the planters at a recent Planning Commission meeting to Dr. Bruce Dunlop, who in turn asked council to consider the matter.

Council denied Dr. Dunlop's request to make the beautification committee of the Planning Commission a non-profit organization so it could accept donations.

Dunlop had received three checks from the United Penn Bank as contributions.

Council approved the following:

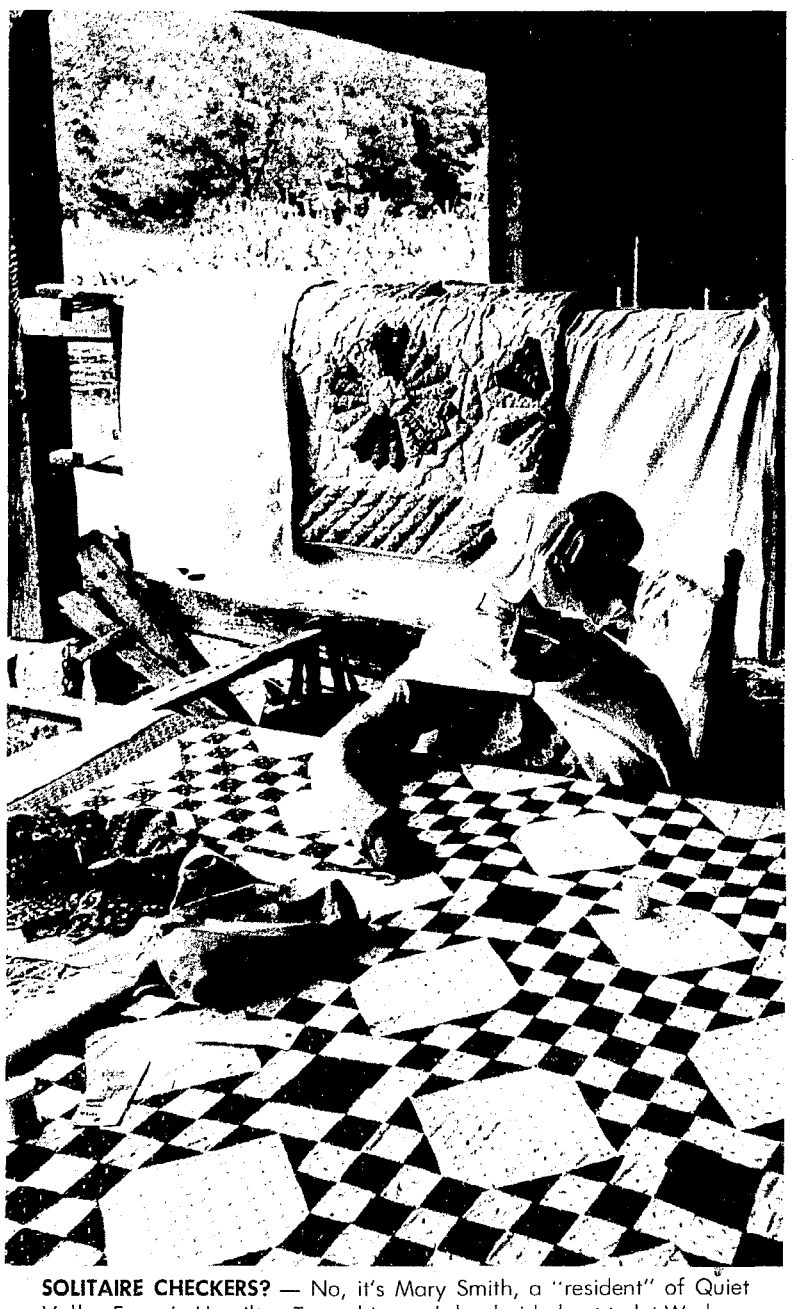

— Reworked plans for the park at the intersection of Dreher Avenue and West Main Street.

— Authorized Albright and Friel to prepare specifications and recommendations for Dreher Avenue and Phillips Street sewers.

— Authorized preparation of a contract with Edward C. Hess Assoc. for engineering and design work on pocket parks.

— Authorized payment of $56,809.35 for work to date on the Sarah Street extension project.

— A banner to hang on a billboard above McConnell Street from Aug. 12 to Sept. 3 to advertise a Pocono Arts and Crafts Festival.

Stroud board barely blinks at proposed traffic lights

STROUDSBURG — Stroud Township supervisors were cool Wednesday night to a Pennsylvania Department of Transportation recommendation traffic signals be erected in two congested areas along Rte. 611.

Supervisors Chairman William Crooks Jr. said the recommendation made by PennDOT's Allentown office would not totally solve the problem of heavy traffic congestion between the Stroudsburg borough line and Bridge Street in Stroud Township.

PennDOT recommended a traffic light be erected at the intersection of Chipperfield Drive and Rte. 611 and at the intersection of Phillips Street and Rte. 611.

Both spots are the location of many traffic accidents and lines of cars backed up to get on Rte. 611, the main artery through Stroud Township's business section.

In the letter supervisors received this week, PennDOT also recommended the township install some type of curbing in several shopping center parking lots along Rte. 611. The curbing would control where vehicles could enter and exit the shopping areas.

Supervisors voiced their concern that installing the traffic signals would be a financial burden on the township. Supervisor Anthony Mangan said there is a measure proposed in the state legislature which would make the state liable for improvements on state highways.

No decision on the matter was reached, however, as John Cruse, chairman of the township's planning commission, asked supervisors to set up a meeting with the PennDOT engineer.

Cruse said the township should sit down with PennDOT and consider all possibilities for controlling traffic along Rte. 611. Supervisors agreed. Secretary J. Nelson Westbrook will request a meeting with the PennDOT engineer.

In another matter, Crooks said supervisors have received the comprehensive plan completed recently by the planning commission. A date for a public hearing will be set and advertised soon, he said.

Justifiable homicide ruled at Pike inquest

MILFORD — Pike County Coroner Duncan M. Stroyan Wednesday ruled the shooting death Monday of a burglary suspect by two state troopers from Milford was justifiable homicide.

His ruling came after a coroner's inquest into the death of Michael L. Descheneau, 29, whose last known address was Kalamazoo, Mich. Descheneau died from gunshots fired by troopers Joseph Kosierowski and Leo Maslawski.

The two troopers chased Descheneau after he was reported to have burglarized a Shohola Township house and held five people at gunpoint for a short whole.

Descheneau, who was driving a stolen car, carrying a stolen .38 caliber pistol reported stolen from Los Angeles, Calif., and wanted by the FBI in Buffalo, N.Y., ignored warnings to stop and pointed the loaded gun at police three times before they shot him.

Pike County District Attorney Harold Thomson concurred with Stroyan's ruling.

Two injured in accident

STROUDSBURG — Two persons were injured Wednesday afternoon when their car skidded out of control and rammed into a tree on Wild Animal Farm Road, Stroud Township.

Saghir A. Shami, 33 and his wife, Yasmeen, of Asbury Park, N.J., were reported to be in satisfactory condition at the General Hospital of Monroe County, East Stroudsburg Wednesday night.

Power interrupted in Bushkill

BUSHKILL — A high voltage fuse blew-out in a Bushkill substation late Wednesday disrupting electricity for over two hours to about 540 customers.

A spokesman for the Metropolitan-Edison Co. said the blow-out was caused by last week's lightning storms weakening the fuse.

A half dozen customers along Wild Animal Farm Road, Stroud Township also reported black-outs around 10 p.m. The Met-Ed spokesman said crews were investigating the cause of the power disruption late Wednesday night.

Lines being double-checked

Fake records found in gas blast

By HARRIET LEEDS
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — The Stroudsburg Gas Company is checking and re-plugging all service lines it has closed off in the past three years to prevent anything like the June 17 explosion on King Street from happening again.

The explosion at 505 King St. resulted in the death of 82-year-old Victor Mion. It knocked the house off its foundation, blew slate off the roof and demolished the back porch.

An investigation by the state Public Utility Commission (PUC) showed gas company workers didn't follow safety procedures when checking a reported gas leak three days before the explosion.

The gas company's own investigation revealed employes of the contractor it had hired to close off the gas main in 1973 had falsified records to show the work had been done when it wasn't, according to Glenn A. Butler, Sr., eastern division manager of Penn Fuel Co., the parent company of Stroudsburg Gas and 19 other Pennsylvania gas companies.

Asked if the gas company was taking any action against the contractor, Butler refused to comment.

"We are going back with our own company personnel and checking all the service lines in the cellars, just to make sure that there's no chance that somebody would falsify another record," Butler said.

The gas company official said up to this date all 70 of the line closings done this year have been re-checked and replugged, as well as 60 to 70 of the estimated 300 jobs done in 1973.

He noted so far the men have not found any lines that were not closed off as they were supposed to be.

Stroudsburg Gas Company started retiring old abandoned gas lines late in 1972, Butler said. Once all the 1973 work is re-checked, he added, the men will also check the 400 or so jobs done in 1974.

John Flaherty, the PUC engineer from the gas safety division who investigated the King Street explosion said "our case is closed."

"We found the leaking pipe in the basement and that was the definite cause of the explosion," Flaherty said.

Flaherty said his remaining concern is the poor relationship between the gas company and the Stroudsburg fire department.

He said a meeting is being arranged to discuss the problem. Borough Manager Ralph Bender had been asked to set up a time and invite the council president, fire chief and gas company officials.

Bender said he didn't think the borough should get involved.

"There's no real problem that I see," he said. "They get permits to open the street and do a good job of fixing the street after they are done."

"As far as us checking their connections," Bender continued, "We don't have anyone qualified to do it and I don't think it's our job."

Rae Cornwall, manager of the Stroudsburg Gas Company could not be reached for comment.

NEW TREASURER — Robert J. Coleman of Kunkletown R.D. 1 is sworn in as Monroe County Treasurer by President Judge Arlington W. Williams during a brief ceremony Wednesday. Coleman succeeds Thomas R. Joyce.

Appointed treasurer takes oath

STROUDSBURG — Robert J. Coleman of Kunkletown R.D. 1 Wednesday was formally sworn in as Monroe County Treasurer by President Judge Arlington W. Williams.

Coleman is to serve out the remaining two years and five months of a four-year term vacated two weeks ago by Thomas R. Joyce who became highway superintendent in the county.

Coleman, 30, brings seven years of experience working for Herbert R. Imbt of Saylorsburg to the $12,000 a year job. He had most recently been office manager for Imbt before leaving to assume his new post.

Coleman, who has been working in the treasurer's office since Joyce resigned July 24, said he is glad he is finally officially treasurer.

A Vietnam veteran, Coleman is active in the Young Democrats and Western Pocono Jaycees. He and his wife Donna have a son, Robert, age 6, and a daughter, Jacqueline, five weeks.

NIPPED IN THE BUD — Cleveland's Rich Manning is tagged out by Yankee catcher Thurmon Munson in the sixth inning Wednesday night after Manning tried to score on a grounder to third in the Indians' 5-3 victory over New York. (UPI)

Hrabosky saves Cardinals' 4-2 victory over Pirates

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Reliever Al Hrabosky recorded his 16th save in pitching the final six outs to give the St. Louis Cardinals a 4-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Wednesday night.

St. Louis starter and winner John Denny, now 6-3, held the Pirates to only two singles until the eighth inning when Craig Reynolds singled, pinch-hitter Willie Randolph walked and Rennie Stennett singled to load the bases with none out.

The Cardinal rookie was pulled in favor of Hrabosky. He served up a wild pitch to score Reynolds. A second run scored on a groundout but Hrabosky retired the next two batters to end the threat.

The Cardinals scored three runs on five hits in the fifth inning to take a 4-0 lead. Ken Reitz opened the rally with a drive to left that got by Richie Zisk for a triple. Reitz scored on Mike Tyson's bloop single. Denny and Buddy Bradford singled to load the bases and Ted Simmons singled with two out to score Bradford and chase Pirate starter and loser Ken Brett, 7-4.

Mets, 9-6

NEW YORK (UPI) — Doubles by Del Unser, Felix Millan and Ed Kranepool helped the New York Mets score seven unearned runs in the sixth inning Wednesday night and present new manager Roy McMillan with a 9-6 victory over the Montreal Expos in a game called by rain in the ninth inning.

With the Mets trailing 4-2 and one out, Wayne Garrett reached first on an error and was forced at second by Jerry Grote, but losing pitcher Steve Renko walked Mike Phillips and pinch-hitter John Milner to load the bases.

Unser then doubled for two runs and Milner scored on a throwing error for the third run. Millan doubled scoring Unser and bringing in Fred Scherman, who was greeted by Kranepool's double that scored Millan with the fifth run. Dave Kingman was intentionally walked. Scherman hit Rusty Staub with a pitch to reload the bases and walked Garrett forcing in the sixth run. Relief pitcher Chuck Taylor walked Grote for the final Mets' tally of the inning.

Reds, 12-5

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Darryl Chaney drove in three runs with three hits and Pete Rose had three hits, scored a run, and drove in another to lead the Cincinnati Reds to a 12-5 victory over the San Francisco Giants Wednesday.

The Reds had 20 hits including six doubles, two triples and a home run.

Cincinnati scored two runs in the second inning on a home run by Tony Perez, a triple by Cesar Geronimo, a double by Chaney and a single by Bill Plummer. Three doubles plus a triple by Geronimo made the score 5-1 in the second inning.

Cincinnati sent 10 batters to the plate in the fifth and scored five more runs, with Chaney's double accounting for three of them.

Downs suspends drivers

WILKES-BARRE — All eight drivers in the tenth race on Tuesday night have been given immediate suspensions pending further investigation by the judges at Pocono Downs.

At the same time the judges revealed that they are continuing to investigate the fifth race of the same evening.

The judges' investigative procedures began immediately following the contesting of the tenth race Tuesday night when three long shots were the first three horses across the finish wire.

The exhaustive investigation conducted by the judges at Pocono Downs will profile driving patterns throughout the race as well as Big Triple wagering patterns.

Surging Orioles take pair from Tigers, gain ground

DETROIT (UPI) — Don Baylor went 6-for-7, including 4-for-4 in the second game Wednesday night to lead the streaking Baltimore Orioles to 4-2 and 8-2 victories over the Detroit Tigers.

The Tigers have now lost 11 in a row and in just two more nights could equal the all-time club record of 13 consecutive losses set in 1920 and 1953. The current streak is the longest since 1953.

Baylor, 13-for-16 since leaving Baltimore four games ago, had two singles, a triple and a double to score two runs and drive in one in the second game after scoring the Orioles' opening run in the second inning of the first game. He also stole three bases in the second game.

The Baltimore outfielder now has 12 hits in 19 at bats in Tiger Stadium for a .632 average this season.

Mike Torrez, with 2 2-3 innings of hitless relief from Wayne Garland, raised his record to 14-6 in the first game while Ross Grimsley, got 3 2-3 innings of relief help from Dyar Miller in the second game to raise his record to 8-11. The Orioles are 18-6 since the All-Star break.

Baylor's double ignited a five-run sixth inning which sewed the second game up. Doug DeCinces doubled him home and Elrod Hendricks followed with a triple, scoring himself when Marc Belanger laid down a suicide squeeze bunt that reliever Tom Walker threw into right field.

Al Bumbry singled Belanger home and Tommy Davis, who had singled home a run in the fifth inning, doubled to produce the final run of the inning.

Baylor singled and scored on a single by Brooks Robinson in the second inning of the opener and the Orioles picked up two runs in the third on a fluke double by Lee May and a single by Jim Northrup.

Red Sox, 5-2

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Doug Griffin's pinch hit single drove home the winning run during a four-run ninth inning Boston uprising Wednesday night, and relief ace Jim Willoughby yielded just two hits in 5 1-3 innings to key the Red Sox to a 5-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

The Red Sox trailed 2-1 going into the ninth. Cecil Cooper opened the inning with a double off Tom Murphy, who had replaced Brewer starter Jim Colborn in the eighth. Juan Beniquez ran for Cooper and took third on a ground out and scored when Rico Petrocelli then blooped a single over shortstop.

Rick Burleson followed with a single, sending Petrocelli to third, and took second on the throw. Rick Austin replaced Murphy and walked pinch hitter Dwight Evans intentionally to load the bases. Griffin, pinch hitting for Denny Doyle, then singled to left scoring pinch runner Bob Heise with the winning run. With two out, Jim Rice completed the scoring with a two-run single to rightfield.

Indians, 5-3

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Rico Carty, hitting at a .422 clip since July 6, belted a three-run homer Wednesday night and reliever Dave LaRoche snuffed out a New York rally in the eighth to pace the Indians to a 5-3 victory over the Yankees.

Cleveland starter Fritz Peterson allowed one run and five hits over the first seven innings before being chased in the eighth after giving up a leadoff single to Fred Stanley and a run-scoring double to Bobby Bonds.

LaRoche came on to give up a run-scoring single to Lou Piniella that scored Bonds. After Roy White's double that dropped in front of Oscar Gamble, who had slipped going after the short fly ball, Thurman Munson was walked intentionally to fill the bases. LaRoche then struck out Graig Nettles, Chris Chambliss and Sandy Alomar.

Royals, 4-3

KANSAS CITY (UPI) — Tony Solaita belted a three-run 450-foot homer in the fourth inning Wednesday night to power the streaking Kansas City Royals to a 4-3 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

The victory was Kansas City's 11th in 14 games under new manager Whitey Herzog.

With two outs in the fourth, Amos Otis walked and scored all the way from first on a double by John Mayberry. George Brett then drew a walk from loser Bert Blyleven (10-6) before Solaita slammed his three-run homer into the back of the rightfield bullpen. It was Solaita's 11th of the season.

ARLINGTON (UPI) — Gaylord Perry held Oakland to seven hits Wednesday night to give the Texas Rangers a 5-2 victory and reduce the A's American League West lead to 6 1-2 games over Kansas City.

Perry, 11-15, has given up only three earned runs in his last 49 innings. He did not walk a batter and did not allow more than one baserunner in any inning until Joe Rudi hit a two-run homer in the ninth.

Oakland has now lost five of its last seven games.

Hawks sign third pick

ATLANTA (UPI) — Eighteen-year-old Bill Willoughby, a youngster with devastating high school credentials but who has never played even a game of college basketball, signed a multi-year no-cut contract Wednesday with the Atlanta Hawks.

Willoughby, 6-8 and 220 pounds and still growing, scored 2,370 points in a three-year career at Dwight Morrow High School in Englewood, N.J. He had intended to attend college at Kentucky before the Hawks selected him as a "hardship" case in the second round of the National Basketball Association draft.

He is only the second high school player in NBA history to be drafted. The first, Darryl Dawkins of Orlando, Fla., recently signed with the Philadelphia 76ers.

The Hawks did not announce the terms of the agreement, other than to say it is for more than one year and is a no-cut contract. It was reported elsewhere that Willoughby signed a five-year contract.

The Hawks earlier lost the NBA's first and third draft choices — North Carolina State's David Thompson and Morgan State's Marvin "The Human Eraser" Webster — to the Denver Nuggets of the American Basketball Association.

'World championship' of golf set for Japan

TOKYO (UPI) — Jack Nicklaus has designed golf courses in the United States, Europe and Asia and now his latest creation, the New St. Andrews Club in Tokyo, will be the home of the $260,000 World Championship of Golf.

The New St. Andrews Golf Club, fashioned after the real thing in Scotland, will play host to 24 of the world's leading professionals in November, 1976, in the inaugural World Championship of Golf which will offer a $75,000 first prize.

Next year the PGA will stage an event at the New Muirfield Village course, situated near Colombus, which is another Nicklaus creation designed to resemble the Scottish layout where he won his first British Open in 1966.

Zenya Hamada, president of the New St. Andrews Club, conceived the idea of the tournament three years ago when Nicklaus drew up the blueprint for the 6,760-yard, par-72 course. Plans were formalized at last month's British Open at Carnoustie, Scotland, following a meeting between Nicklaus and Hamada.

John Montgomery, an associate of Nicklaus, said invitations would be extended the U.S. and British Open champions; the Masters titlist; the PGA champion; the TPD champion; the leading five money winners on the U.S. tour; the Japanese Open and PGA champions, and the top two men in the World Cup, golf's international team championship.

Additionally, invitations would also be extended the winner of the World Series of Golf; the top two money winners on the Japanese tour, and the leaders of the European, Australia-New Zealand, Asian and South African tours. The remaining places would be filled by sponsors' invitations.

Area grapplers attend clinic

BETHLEHEM — Seven area wrestlers recently attended the second week of the annual Sheridan-Leeman Wrestling Clinic at Lehigh University.

Included in the group were Parker Finney and Dan Maiorello of East Stroudsburg, Robert Caiazzo of Bangor and Todd Rauchenberger, John Tomanio, Steve Wasserman and Dan Woolever of Stroudsburg.

Lucchesi given one-year contract

ARLINGTON, Tex. (UPI) — Frank Lucchesi, hired last month to replace the dismissed Billy Martin, Wednesday was given a one-year extension on his contract to manage the Texas Rangers.

When Lucchesi originally was named to succeed Martin, he was signed only to finish the 1975 season.

"It is evident to everyone, I believe, that Lucchesi has the admiration of his club," said Rangers' board chairman Brad Corbett in announcing the contract extension. "He is a sound baseball man in all respects and we are proud to have him managing the Rangers.

"This extension should have a stabilizing effect on our predominantly young club."

One of the principle causes of Martin's firing was his inability to handle the younger players on the club. Sixteen members of the Ranger roster range in age from 22 to 27.

"Frank's background, his experience and his familiarity with Rangers' personnel make him a most desirable choice," said Ranger general manager Dan O'Brien. "He is a thoroughly dedicated, knowledgeable and cooperative individual who has earned the respect of those affiliated with him."

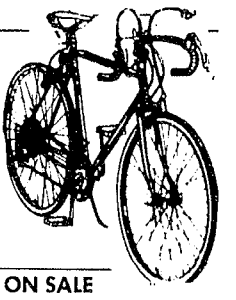

Frank Lucchesi

The Rangers have posted an 8-8 record since Lucchesi took over the job.

Voice of experience

By JOE DeVIVO
Record Sports Writer

There are certainly a lot of soccer players around who are younger and faster than Kurt Kramer. But it's doubtful there are too many who can equal Kramer's experience and wisdom.

Kramer, veteran captain of the Memmingen Germany Soccer Club which met the Pocono Snow in two exhibitions this week, is still going strong as ever at age 36.

Kramer played in more than 70 matches last season and estimated his playing experience covers 700 games in a 14-year Memmingen career.

When most players his age are either retired members of senior citizen teams, Kramer remains an important cog in the Memmingen defense. His secret of longevity is simple.

"You must not only play with the legs," Kramer said. "Experience is just as important."

Kramer's soccer abilities aren't confined to his actions as a player. He's also shown he can coach.

During the 1972 season Memmingen was mired in last place and in danger of dropping out of Division One to a lower level of competition: Kramer was asked to take over the coaching reins.

Over the final seven games of the season, the team responded and finished 6-0-1 to escape the cellar.

Kramer had an opportunity to observe the brand of soccer played in America two years ago during a visit to the United States.

After a second view at American soccer, he believes the teams are getting better, but still have a lot of room for improvement.

"It's much better than two years ago," Kramer said. "But it's still too individualized. They need better passing and better teammate technique."

Kramer's two other main criticisms concerned the American style of offensive attack.

"They're not aggressive enough in front of the goal," he pointed out. "They're not so dangerous near the goal as European players."

American players could also learn a few lessons about moving without the ball.

"Of course it's important to move with the ball," Kramer said. "It's just as important to look for the free spaces when you don't have the ball. You have to create free space away from the ball."

Players in Germany begin playing organized soccer when they are 7 or 8 years old. Out of the vast numbers involved in the programs, however, only a few ever graduate to the top level teams.

"It's a good result to produce two or three players per year for the first team out of about 120 prospects," Kramer said.

The move by Brazilian superstar Pele to the New York Cosmos of the North American Soccer League aroused quite a bit of interest in Germany. But Kramer feels most fans were disappointed by the move. He drew an analogy to the same type of thing happening to Germany's Franz Beckenbauer, star of the German national team.

"I think the fans were a little disappointed with Pele," Kramer said. "It would be the same as if Beckenbauer at age 35 went to play in Korea. It would have been much better if Pele came here and gave clinics to younger players around the country."

Memmingen wound up its four-game tour of the United States Tuesday night against the Snow. The team will travel to New York City for a few days of sightseeing before returning to Germany.

The Germans have already invited the Pocono Snow to Memmingen next summer. If travel arrangements can be made, the Snow will make the trip.

It's a good bet when they arrive they'll find Kurt Kramer still on the field as an important part of the Memmingen team.

Mets hand Berra his walking papers

NEW YORK (UPI) — Less than two weeks after issuing the ball club a flat ultimatum, Yogi Berra became the major leagues' fourth manager to be fired in the past 16 days when he was dismissed Wednesday by the slumping New York Mets.

Roy McMillan, one of the Mets' coaches and a former shortstop for them, took over the club immediately for a game with Montreal at Shea Stadium after being named to fill in for Berra the remainder of the season.

M. Donald Grant, the Mets' board chairman, notified Berra of his dismissal early Wednesday morning.

Berra's three-year contract was not due to expire until after the 1976 season and Grant told him he could have a job inside the Mets' organization if he wished.

The decision to fire Berra was reached during the seventh inning of the second game of Tuesday's doubleheader with the Montreal Expos.

"For the best interests of the team and the fans, we felt a change should be made," said Grant.

Grant and General Manager Joe McDonald decided to make a change after the Expos beat the Mets twice Tuesday at Shea Stadium, each time by a 7-0 score. The two losses extended the New Yorkers' losing string to five games and dropped them 9-½ games behind first-place Pittsburgh in the National League East.

While those two shutouts actually triggered the 50-year-old Berra's departure, he figuratively loaded the gun himself for the front office with his uncharacteristically hard line in the Cleon Jones' affair.

Both Grant and McDonald chose not to dwell on the Jones' affair during Wednesday's news conference. They said the Jones episode had nothing to do with Berra's firing, but it is obvious that it did.

Berra sent Jones up to pinch hit for Ed Kranepool in a game with Atlanta at Shea Stadium on July 18 and then told him to go out and play left field after he lined out. Jones refused to go to the outfield.

"Get somebody else," he said to Berra. "I'm not going out there."

Later, Jones said the reason he wouldn't play in the outfield was because his unsound left knee hadn't been wrapped with a protective bandage.

Yogi Berra

Roy McMillan

Berra had problems with Jones before, but this one, he said, "put the icing on the cake. I knew I wasn't going to take anymore."

Jones was suspended by the Mets, and now there was the question of whether they should take him back or release him if they couldn't make a trade for him, which is the way it turned out.

The Mets pride themselves on being one big happy family. Anxious to keep that image for the club, Grant and others in the Mets' front office talked to Berra, hoping he would relent and take Jones back.

Berra ordinarily uses a soft line in handling his players.

Not this time, though.

When the Mets gave evidence of possibly taking back Jones, Berra laid down his ultimatum.

"It's either him or me," he said.

In this case, it turned out to be both.

The Mets handed the 32-year-old Jones his unconditional release Monday after he had been with them 10 years, the same length of time Berra had.

"We came close to making a change several times, but each time the change was postponed because the team bounced back," said Grant. "When you consider only last Sunday we were in the thick of the battle and by Wednesday, in baseball parlance, disaster had struck, something simply had to be done."

The Pirates swept a doubleheader from the Mets this past Sunday after the Mets had taken the first three games of the series. The Expos then beat the Mets Monday night before sweeping Tuesday's doubleheader.

In answer to a direct question as to whether Berra would have been retained had the Mets beaten the Pirates and Expos, Grant said "yes."

Berra's firing by the Mets came only four days after Billy Martin, a former teammate of his, was named manager of the Yankees, who share Shea Stadium with the Mets.

Martin had been fired as manager of the Texas Rangers July 21. Kansas City dismissed Jack McKeon 72 hours later and the Yankees terminated Bill Virdon's contract this past Saturday.

Berra nearly lost his job as Mets' manager two years ago when they dropped to fifth place in August of 1973. Consideration was given to making a change then, but Berra's job was saved when the Mets won 20 out of 28 in September to finish first in their division and then beat the Cincinnati Reds in the playoff for the National League pennant.

McMillan, a 46-year-old native of Bonham, Tex., was considered the National League's outstanding defensive shortstop during most of the 10 years he spent with Cincinnati from 1951 to 1960. He also played for the Milwaukee Braves and Mets.

A quiet, low-key type individual, McMillan managed the Visalia club of the California League for the Mets in 1968, then won a divisional title and the playoffs with Memphis of the Texas League a year later.

Weatherman may cooperate for PGA's opening round

If it's cool, Miller may get hot

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — Johnny Miller looked up from his cheeseburger and milk shake, and glanced through the big glass windows of the grill room, out toward the ninth green.

"This is nice," he said. "I hope the weather stays just like this."

It was cool and windy Wednesday, and there's a chance for more of the same today when the PGA Championship begins. It's weather that's similar to a typical day in northern California, Miller's home grounds.

Without a calendar you'd never have known it was August.

"I'm a victim of my upbringing," Miller said. "In the summer time, I've just always played like a turkey."

That's not entirely accurate.

But Miller's summer record probably has been under more scrutiny this year than at any time in the past, largely because he has made so much noise about taking over from Jack Nicklaus as the game's No. 1 player.

"If you look at my summer play every year, it's just mediocre," Miller said. "I just basically play good when the weather's cool. If I had any brains, I'd just play from January through the Masters, then take off until the fall every year."

Miller won three tournaments early this year, just like he did last year. But he hasn't won any more since February. He hasn't finished ahead of Nicklaus, not even once, in the nine tournaments in which they both played.

He's fourth on the current money list, with $183,885, which as Miller will say, "isn't too shabby," but that's just not good enough any more "because people expect me to win all the time now," he said.

He created that monster himself by winning the 1973 U.S. Open, in hot weather, and then winning a total of eight tournaments on the tour last year.

"There's a fine line between good and mediocre," Miller said. "I'm not playing that bad."

Since winning three of the first four 1975 tournaments, he has had high finishes including a second place tie with Tom Weiskopf in the Masters and a third place tie with Nicklaus in the British Open.

Two withdraw

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — Hubert Green withdrew from the PGA Championship Wednesday because of the death Monday of his father, and Bert Yancey pulled out because of illness, reducing the starting field to 139.

Yancey won the American Golf Classic on the Firestone Country Club course in 1972.

Young shoots sizzling 68 to lead European Open

SUNNINGDALE, England (UPI) — Donna Young, a bubbling blonde from Los Angeles, shot a six-under-par 68 Wednesday to take a two-stroke lead after the first round of the $66,000 Colgate European Women's Open Golf championship.

The 30-year-old Californian, enjoying the extremely hot weather, had an eagle and nine birdies in her round, which also included five bogeys, to lead from a trio of players which included Sandra Palmer, Mary Mills and Jane Blalock.

Miss Young, a former U.S. Open champion, was playing in her first major competition after breaking her rib cage two months ago.

"That's the most birdies I've ever made," said the beaming Miss Young who discounted her bogeys—she made only three pars.

Miss Young was forced to sit out the tour during July because of her injury.

"I was practicing during the LPGA championships at Baltimore in June," she said, "and the first shot I hit was a little pitching wedge. My caddie was 40 yards away, but even he heard my rib cage pop. I tore all the muscle on the left side, but as I was only one stroke off the lead, I decided to play the last two rounds. It was the worst thing I ever did because I was then ordered to take a month's complete rest."

In a dazzling triple birdie finish, Miss Young sank her eighth single putt from 30-feet on No. 18 to climax a romp over the 6,174-yard old course which began with an eagle and two birdies.

Miss Young was out in 32, aided by an eagle three at the 450-yard second where she sank a 10-footer after reaching the green with a drive and a four iron. She played the backside in 36.

Drackett industrial champion

STROUDSBURG — With a 13-12 victory in the third and final game of a best-of-three playoff recently, Drackett won the YMCA Industrial League softball championship with a 2-1 edge over McGraw-Edison.

Gary Kirkwood was the winner in the deciding game, with Bob George and Carl Besecker collecting three hits each. Larry Hardy had three hits for the loser and Fred Hineline took the loss.

Drackett won the first game, 11-5, as Rich Koberlein got the win and Besecker drove in three runs with four hits. Lou Sebo had four hits for the loser.

McGraw-Edison, with Sebo driving in six runs with a three-run homer and three other hits, came back to tie the series with a 22-5 victory in the second game. Terry Miller and Besecker had three hits each for Drackett.

Astros ready to name new general manager

HOUSTON (UPI) — New York Yankees' Executive Vice President Talbot M. "Tal" Smith, who learned his front office skills in 13 years with the Houston Astros organization, will be named Astros' general manager today.

He will replace H.B. "Spec" Richardson, with whom he often disagreed in the trading of players during his career with the Astros—six years of which was spent in the front office.

The Astros called a 9 a.m. CDT news conference to announce the choice of Smith. John Mullin has served as acting general manager for the past month.

Smith, 41, has worked in the major leagues 18 years, two with Cincinnati, 13 with Houston and two with the Yankees. His first job in the majors, Smith liked to say, was as a stenographer for Gabe Paul at Cincinnati.

It was Paul who has had the most influence on Smith's career. In 1961 Paul, then Astros' general manager, brought Smith into the organization as his assistant. Paul quit that job one year later and Smith moved to head the Astros' farm system.

Then in 1973, after Smith had moved through various jobs with the Astros to become a vice president in the operation of the Astrodome and Astrohall —a job he didn't like because it was away from baseball—Paul again hired him to go to New York.

Ever since Smith took his first job with the Astros, he always wanted the general manager position. But he never had the opportunity to displace Richardson.

Tennis matches rescheduled

STROUDSBURG — All matches scheduled for Wednesday in the Stroudsburg Women's Open Tennis Tournament were postponed due to rain.

The Wednesday matches will be reset for 5:30 p.m. today. The doubles matches originally slated for today will be played at 5:30 p.m. Friday.

Softball make-up

STROUDSBURG — Wednesday night's scheduled Pocono Tavern League softball game between Palace Bar and Stroud Manor, which was postponed by rain, will be played at 6 p.m. today at Klingel's Field.

King and His Court to play in Eastburg

EAST STROUDSBURG — The King and His Court four-man softball team will appear at the East Stroudsburg High School Stadium on Tuesday, August 26 at 6:15 p.m.

The show, sponsored by the Pocono Mountain Jaycees, will feature a seven inning game against a Pocono All Star team with a pre-game and post-game show by superstar softball pitcher Eddie Feigner.

The King and His Court features Eddie Feigner on the mound, backed up by only three others players—Al Jackson, a 17-year veteran at first base, Gary West at shortstop, and Les Barber behind the plate. Eddie Feigner Jr. will also share duty at shortstop.

Feigner's antics on the mound include pitching while blindfolded, under his legs, behind his back, from his knees, from second base, and from center field. His fast ball has been timed at 104 miles per hour.

Robert Ace is serving as chairman of the promotion for the Jaycees and is organizing a Pocono All Stars team to face the King and His Court.

The Pocono roster and advance ticket outlets will be announced soon.

LEO

ARIES (March 21 to April 20) — A few delays likely. Also, your powers or authority may be challenged. Here is where your quick thinking, acumen and general good judgment will be needed.

TAURUS (April 21 to May 21) — Care needed in travel, production, educational matters. There's a tendency toward carelessness which could lead to needless errors.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21) — You may find some real values in seemingly unimportant offerings. Don't dismiss lightly. Neither make changes in matters now running smoothly.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23) — Be circumspect in writings, careful in signing papers, handling the affairs of others. Accuracy essential!

LEO (July 24 to August 23) — Stellar influences excellent! If any of your plans have been stymied lately, THIS is the time to try again! Imagination and originality stimulated.

VIRGO (August 24 to September 23) — A new approach may be necessary in some areas, in order to cope with unusual situations but day, on the whole, stimulates incentive, can bring advancement.

LIBRA (September 24 to October 23) — Do not become frustrated over possible delays or disappointments. With your innate intelligence and ingenuity, you can change those undersirable situations.

SCORPIO (October 24 to November 22) — Fine planetary influences. With initiative and enterprise, more than usual can be achieved. Day will definitely respond to spunk and pulling power.

SAGITTARIUS (November 23 to December 21) — It's not like you to throw your weight around, demand and command or give ultimatums, but such tendencies prevail now. So . . . watch your tactics. There's no use in alienating others.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20) — The stars warn against you vacillating, changing plans or projects before they have been given a fair chance. Be steadfast. Nothing has changed since activities were initiated.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19) — A day for listening well and voicing honest opinions. Take stock of why certain maneuvers and tactics did not succeed in the past and avoid them now.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20) — A day in which to get away from routine. New scenes, new places, new people could spark a brand new interest in your life, make it more stimulating.

YOU BORN TODAY are endowed with a fine intellect and rarely tap all of your many resources during a lifetime. You have a dynamic personality, are usually vibrant and enthusiastic, but may drift into moodiness at times. You are a perfectionist at heart and no matter what you undertake, will do extremely well.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♥	Pass	2 ♦
Pass	2 ♥	Pass	2 NT
Pass	3 ♥	Pass	4 ♥

Opening lead — king of clubs.

When the same hand is played at two tables — which is what happens in team of four matches — there is often a different approach to both the bidding and play.

As a result the outcome is frequently different, which is precisely what occurred in this deal from a match played in Las Vegas between the Italian Blue Team and the Dallas Aces.

At the first table, Avarelli and Belladonna got to four hearts for the Blue Team on the bidding shown. West led the king of clubs and, after East played the deuce, shifted to the king of spades. East signaled with the nine and, when West continued with the queen, East contributed the five.

For practical purposes, the hand was now finished, as Belladonna was able to discard his J-10-8 of spades on the A-K-Q of diamonds and so score 620 points.

At the second table, the same contract was reached by the Aces on this bidding:

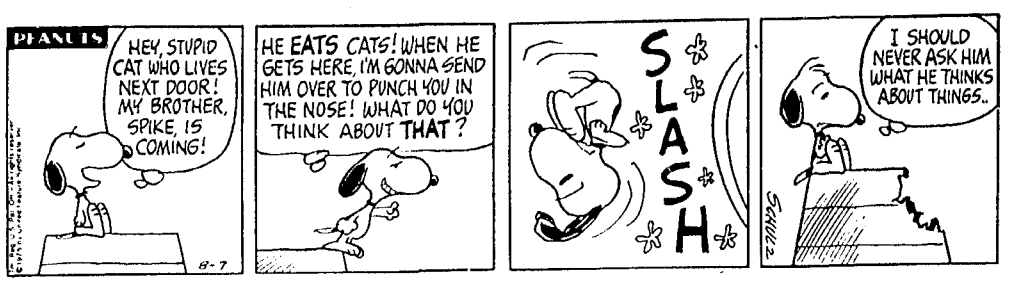

East	South	West	North
Pass	4 ♥	Pass	Pass
Pass

Garozzo led the king of clubs, shifted to the king of spades on which Forquet played the nine, and continued with the queen, thus duplicating West's first three plays at the first table.

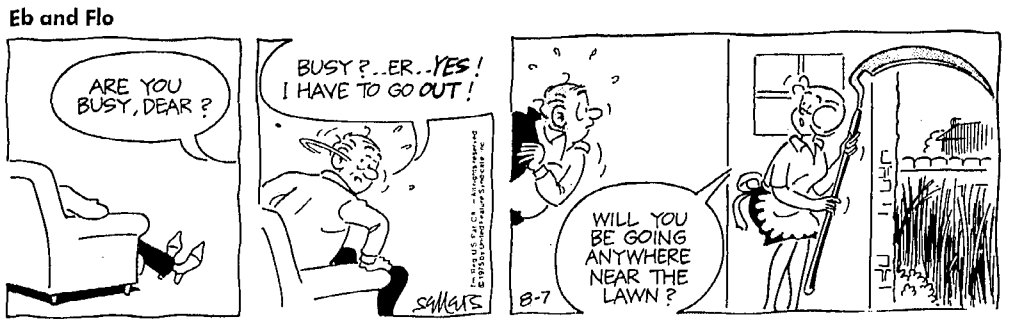

But here came the parting of the ways when Forquet, at trick three, overtook the queen with the ace and returned the five of spades. Garozzo ruffed and the American declarer found himself going down before he could even get started.

Forquet reasoned that Garozzo would have led a low spade at trick three, if he had one, and that West therefore had to have the doubleton K-Q for his queen play. Forquet couldn't have been more right.

Meat prices at all-time high

By NORMAN FISCHER and JOSEPH WINSKI
Dow Jones-Ottaway News

CHICAGO — A supermarket in this town is selling porterhouse steak for $2.69 a pound. That is $1 a pound more than it sold the cut for this spring and 60 cents a pound more than it has ever asked for porterhouse.

At another store, center-cut pork chops that sold for less than 90 cents a pound last summer are selling for $1.98 a pound. A pound of a leading brand of bacon also sells for $1.98 a pound: It cost less than $1.29 a pound last summer.

There is nothing unique about Chicago or these particular stores. Meat prices across the country are at record or near-record levels.

This is the chief reason why food prices in June, as measured by the most recent consumer price index, rose 1.9 per cent from May, or at a stunning annual rate of 22.8 per cent. The June rise pushed grocery prices 8.7 per cent above the year-earlier level.

June's prices had nothing to do with Russian grain purchases to date or to come. They also had nothing to do with the now somewhat bleaker outlook for the U.S. crops this year because of drought conditions in the western corn belt in July.

But these new factors atop the sharp June rise in prices are causing many food-price analysts to reassess their positions.

A few weeks ago, before the Russians came and the rains in Iowa didn't, most analysts seemed to agree with the official Agriculture Department estimate of a 6 per cent to 8 per cent rise in food prices this year, compared with jumps of 14.5 per cent each in 1973 and 1974.

Now a growing number of economists are wondering if the U.S. is facing its third straight year of a double-digit rise in food prices.

If that happens, the chances of pulling out of the recession without fanning the inflation that helped cause the recession in the first place would be lessened substantially.

Food and fuel prices often are cited as being significant determinants of the rate of inflation. A number of economists already have painted bleak outlooks for fuel prices, so what happens to food prices could be critical.

At present there appears to be far more confusion than consensus. "The June rise is probably something of a fluke," says David Rowe, an economist for the Wharton Econometrics, a rather sophisticated application of statistics.

In the confusion, a few things are relatively clear, however. The first is that the food index for July probably will be just as jolting as June's. The second is that meat prices appear to have peaked and could be substantially lower during the second half of the year. The third is that prices of a number of foods outside the red-meat category are rising again. That would reverse the June trend, when foods other than meat and fresh fruit and vegetables declined in price.

A key question in many analysts' minds is whether the expected decline in meat prices later this year will be offset by higher prices for poultry, eggs, sugar and other nonmeat foods.

The high meat prices are due largely to sharply reduced marketings of cattle and hogs, analysts say. In the case of hogs, there is a genuine shortage of animals.

High grain prices brought on by last summer's drought, combined with low hog prices, caused many producers to slaughter their sows and cut production. Those decisions will cause total pork production this year to be the lowest in nine years; per-capita production will be the smallest in more than 40 years.

Farmers and ranchers were continuing to feed their cattle grass rather than send them to be fed grain in feedlots.

Japanese airline recovers politically forfeited route

TOKYO (UPI) — The $29 million Tokyo-Taipei air route which Japan Air Lines lost when it inaugurated flights to Peking is being restored through the back door.

The Japanese government approved late in July the formation of a new airline that will enable Japan Air Lines to cash in on the profitable route it lost last year.

It set up Air Orient, a subsidiary wholly owned by JAL, which will start operation between Tokyo and Taipei Sept. 1, under a private air agreement signed recently by Japan and Taiwan. The link was suspended in April 1974 when Japan and China concluded a civil air treaty.

JAL, the country's flag carrier half-owned by the government, lost the lucrative Taipei route under that treaty and could not operate Japan-Taiwan flights directly since it was also flying the Tokyo-Peking air route.

Before the suspension, JAL operated 37 round-trip flights between Taiwan and Japan which brought it net annual earnings of $29.3 million. In the last full year of operation, 1973, JAL carried 340,000 passengers on the route.

Government sources said Air Orient initially will operate 23 weekly round-trip flights, seven Tokyo-Taipei non-stops, 14 on the Tokyo-Taipei-Hong Kong route and two on the Tokyo-Taipei-Manila corridor. The number may be increased later.

The government decision to create Air Orient snuffed out the hopes of Toa Domestic Airways, which also wanted to operate the Tokyo-Taipei air route.

JAL's financial loss amounted to $91 million last year, due to high operating costs resulting from the 1973 oil crisis but also because of the loss of the air service between Taiwan and Japan. The company managed to cut its loss to $60 million through a special reserve fund.

Representatives of the East Asia Relations Associations—semiofficial offices established after Taiwan and Japan severed diplomatic ties in September, 1972—signed a private air agreement July 9 to resume the suspended air service.

JAL, citing previous experience, claimed it should get its former air business back, on condition that this time it will be operated by a subsidiary so as not to jeopardize its regular flights between Tokyo and Peking.

Mixed market close result of continued wariness

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bargain hunters twice failed to rally the stock market from its inflation worries Wednesday and prices closed mixed in moderate trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which prior to this session had lost 71.66 points since July 15, gained 3.52 points to 813.67. After opening slightly lower, the closely watched average moved more than four points higher twice during the day because of selected bargain hunting.

The market's second rally attempt during the afternoon apparently was sparked by the Federal Reserve Board's attempts to keep federal fund rates from rising.

Observers noted rising interest rates over the past several weeks had prompted many investors to switch their attentions to the bond market, where short-term money instruments were yielding more return than stocks.

But the inflation fears ignited by Armco Steel's decision Tuesday to raise prices dominated Wall Street's thoughts throughout the day, prompting some selling and driving many investors to the sidelines.

Armco's announcement raised fears the price hike would be followed by others and send inflation into the same kind of spiral that crippled the economy last year. After the market closed, Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel announced it also was raising flat-rolled steel prices by 9 per cent.

The Labor Department's report due Thursday on the July Wholesale Price Index is likely to intensify inflation fears. A number of government officials have predicted a sharp increase.

Prices closed lower in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The average price of an Amex share lost four cents. Volume totaled 1,900,000 shares.

Market's morals too common?

LONDON (UPI) — Mrs. Mary Whitehouse is working on an international conference she hopes will convene in the autumn to do something about the moral climate in the Common Market.

What exactly it will do she isn't quite sure at this early stage. But her National Viewers and Listeners' Association has been trying to scrub British TV, radio and show business in general whiter than white with its own brand of moral detergent for 11 years.

There have been some victories — most notable recently was a court ruling that a film could be adjudged obscene even if it was approved for showing by the London County Council. And a number of defeats — British audiences refuse to modify their delight in double entendres, the more obvious the better.

What makes matters worse is that British comedians, with pretended innocence, take advantage of Cockney rhyming slang to disarm Mrs. Whitehouse and her aides by saying obliquely what would form the basis of protests to the television networks if they dared say it in open English.

Mrs. Whitehouse, a 64-year-old former schoolteacher who founded the Viewers and Listeners' Association, said in an interview that she does not want to inflict — if that's the word — the morals of Britain on the rest of Europe. On the other hand she does not want the Eurovision TV linkup of the nine nations of the Common Market to imperil the morals of Britain.

Hence the idea for a convention of like thinkers from the European Economic Community and elsewhere now that Britain is firmly a member of the group.

"The moral and cultural climate of Europe can be shaped to match the challenge of economic and industrial integration," she said. "We feel you cannot separate the moral state of Britain and Europe from its economic state. We won't solve our financial problems till we solve our moral problems."

Mrs. Whitehouse said she was in touch with certain key people in the Common Market countries about the date and venue of the proposed conference which she sees as a small and private preparatory meeting for a much larger and more public gathering.

"I know they face the same problems, including moral pollution," she said. "We are not going to set up a European censorship system. In whatever country, the ordinary person has his own good taste. What we do want is a much more free exchange of information among the countries, a common standard of what is obscene, perhaps some mutual consent on where the line is drawn."

She said American and Australian and other interested parties also werre aking part in a loosely knit international grapevine for the exchange of information on threats to morals.

In Britain Mrs. Whitehouse has demanded an independent Television Council to watch over programs. She has objected to the doube entendres which she said are "the stock in trade" of the British Broadcasting Corp.

"By constantly pandering to the lowest common denominator the BBC creates and establishes new lows in public taste," she said.

She will be paying the same close attention to Europe. It would never do if the Common Market got too common for Britain.

Add hearing loss to smoker's problems

BERRIEN SPRINGS, Mich. (UPI) — Heavy smokers are not only flirting with lung cancer, emphysema, wrinkles and yellow teeth, but they may be jeopardizing their hearing as well, according to a recent study.

Andrews University audiologist Stephen Prescod, reporting on clinical research into the effects of cigarette smoking on the middle ear, says there is a definite link between heavy smoking and loss of hearing.

"Smoking can affect one's hearing in much the same way that aging does," Prescod said in a report released by the university. "Those smoking 20 or more cigarettes a day can expect enough loss in sensitivity to both high and low frequencies to impair understanding of normal speech."

He said "s" and "p" sounds are high frequency sounds that can be affected by smoking. "Prolonged and heavy smoking, then, might hinder ones ability to differentiate between the words 'Miss,' 'Mrs.' or 'Ms,'" Prescod said.

Heavy smokers also stand a poorer chance of undergoing successful surgical operations on the eardrums than do nonsmokers, he said.

"Tobacco smoke enters the middle ear through the eustachian tube, which links the ear to the upper respiratory tract," Prescod said. "Both the eustachian tube and the middle ear are damaged in the process."

Prescod, citing previous clinical research, said guinea pigs exposed to tobacco smoke suffered "intense degenerative symptoms affecting nearly all the tissues of the middle ear."

Damaged, he said, were blood vessels, cells, the balance mechanism and the cochlea—the organ that translates sound vibration to nerve impulse.

Lester Coleman, M.D.

Role of the para-medic

I went to the emergency room of a hospital to be treated for a burn on my hand. It's bad enough to be treated by an intern, but they assigned someone who was not even a doctor to take care of me.

Mrs. D. L. T., Del.

Dear Mrs. T.:

Let me immediately remind you of the obvious fallacy in your letter when you say that it is "bad enough to be treated by an intern."

An intern in a hospital is a full fledged doctor who has earned the degree of M.D. after years of hard work and medical training.

Interns are qualified to engage in private practice, but have chosen to continue advanced studies in a hospital for more thorough training.

All assignments given to them by their superiors can be carried out by them with accuracy and with good judgment. Special problems that arise are solved in consultation with staff members of greater experience.

The demands of modern medicine are so great that certain routine responsibilities that are time-consuming are now being assigned to very well-trained personnel known as "para-medical" assistants. These "para-medics" do not have the M.D. degree, but have undergone rigorous training with very special supervision.

Before they are permitted to treat patients their qualifications are well established. Of course, they, too, perform their duties under the jurisdiction of doctors. Whenever any medical situation arises that specifically demands the attention of a doctor, one is always available.

The value of para-medics has long been known on the battlefield. They have been responsible for emergency treatment that has saved thousands of lives.

The administering of routine injections, the dressing of wounds, the preparation for surgery, and the myriad time-consuming details that would normally take up the busy time of doctors and nurses are now safely and competently handled by the para-medical personnel.

Ongoing courses in medical education allow the para-medics to "specialize" in various fields of medicine. Not only emergency rooms are benefiting from the para-medics, but doctors, too, in their private practices are employing them in an effort to be relieved of specific details. In this way, the doctor can better utilize his time in helping his patients.

Para-medics are a valuable adjunct in modern medicine.

Whenever I get an infection of the tonsils or the throat the glands in my neck become swollen. Is this a dangerous sign?

Miss B.C., Neb.

Dear Miss C.:

On the contrary, swelling of the glands in the neck indicates that your body defenses are in excellent order.

Infection by bacteria extends from its original site through the lymph channels to these lymph glands. The glands become a protective device to keep infections from spreading into the blood stream and into distant parts of the body.

It is common for an infection of the finger to be followed by swelling of the glands in the armpit. This is another evidence of how the body defenses keep infections localized.

The protective aspects of glands in all parts of the body are part of the wondrous mechanism of the body defenses.

Solar heating can cut costs — but beware of fakes

By PAUL C. HOOD
Dow Jones-Ottaway News

Tired of ballooning heating bills? Frightened by prospects of harder-to-get fuels? Today you can buy a solar-heating system for your home to cut your dependence on traditional fuels.

But before you sash out to buy one, stop a moment to arm yourself against possible fast-buck promotions and consider:

— Solar-heating systems will cost you more than normal home heating plants, some say 2½ to 4 times more. If the solar systems work properly you should be able to recapture the cost of fuel savings. But if they don't you can be left with an ungainly conglomeration of space-age plumbing that will be antique before its time.

— The fledgling solar-equipment industry has grown rapidly in the past year, but you will find practically no familiar industrial names in the market. That means you must use extra care in choosing a reliable product.

— The government has issued temporary standards for solar-heating equipment but has established no test programs for specific products.

— There still are relatively few reliable sources of information for the interested homeowner, and few architects and engineers have experience in determing equipment needs.

— And those most knowledgeable in the solar-heating field are aware — and many are fearful — of the danger that a solar "con game" can become the next big growth industry.

Doubts or not, solar-heating hardware is sprouting on a variety of rooftops. Governments consciousness has been raised as to possible solar contributions to the energy shortage. Even President Ford's new swimming pool soon will be heated by solar devices.

Solar heating is based on a simple technology ("It works regardless of what you put together," boasts one advocate;, and therein lies much of the problem.

Some self-styled solar experts, and most potential customers, fail to understand the complexities of translating a simple technology into an effective working system. There's more to it than slapping solar collectors on the roof and turning off the oil or gas.

Virginia Knauer, consumer-affairs adviser to President Ford is preparing a booklet of advice for prospective solar-unit purchasers. It will include tips from the industry, government agencies, and consumer organizations.

Until such help is available, the advice of solar experts concentrates on these points;

— Don't buy any solar-heating equipment for a new house or for an established residence without consulting a competent architect or engineer.

— Insist on proof of the equipment's ability to perform as advertised. This could be provided by a reputable commercial testing laboratory or, sometimes, by university test facilities.

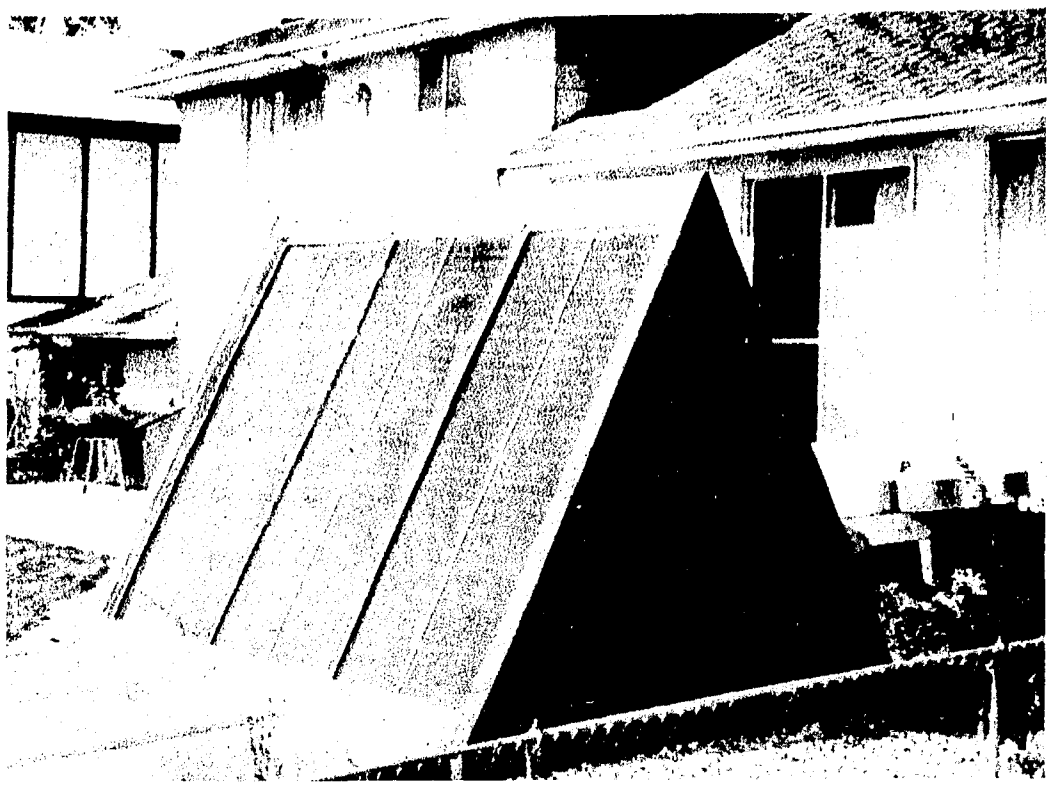

— Don't buy a solar-heating system piecemeal. Deal with a competent contractor who can supply the entire installation, properly mated for the desired performance.

— Satisfy yourself of a company's ability to fulfill product warranties.

First efforts at standardizing solar hardware are contained in "Interim Performance Criteria" published by the National Bureau of Standards. These criteria, prepared for the Department of Housing and Urban Development, will apply to units to be installed under the Solar Heating and Cooling Demonstration Act, passed by Congress last year.

Copies of the Interim Performance Criteria are available from the Superindendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Ask for stock number 0324-01043. The price is $1.90.

What may be the first comprehensive solar equipment catalog is being assembled by the Solar Energy Division of the Energy Research and Development Administration. Planned to be published this fall, it will be based on information now being solicited by questionnaires to the industry.

Backyard solar energy furnace in the Los Angeles area

Now there's a toy fire truck!

BATAVIA, Ill. (UPI) — "Fireman Augie" is in his glory these summer days.

He fights pretend fires daily in an honest-to-goodness, 19-foot, shiny red fire engine parked in the yard of his rural home near this far western Chicago suburb.

A dozen or so neighborhood youngsters join him — touching off the whining sirens or making believe they're fighting a blazing inferno.

August Gering, 4, has had this thing about fire engines, his mother Elynor Gering said, "ever since he could walk and talk."

"I think he's got every toy fire engine there is," his aunt, Mary Sue Bowman, said. "Every time he asks for a present it's another fire engine, another hook and ladder."

As Augie's July 11 birthday neared, Mrs. Gering learned the St. Charles fire department had a 1946 Dodge fire engine up for auction. She and her husband, John, submitted a bid for $511 and bought it.

They drove it home, sirens wailing, and presented it to their son as a gift.

"He was just thrilled," Mrs. Bowman said. "He told everybody he saw, "I got a 1946 Dodge fire engine. It's all mine.

"He likes to climb around in the back end of it. He doesn't want to be the chief. He wants to be Fireman Augie and fight fires."

Sometimes Gering, a truck driver, drives the whole crew around the 30-acre lot, Augie in his lap and Augie's 6-year-old sister Kate nearby.

"I'm going to be a fireman," Augie vows. "My dad's gonna be a fireman, too."

MASSIVE MODEL — Louis Kuebler, 79, adjusts line on elaborate model of USS Constitution, 'Old Ironsides', which he and a friend, now deceased, built over 25-year period, from 1932 to 1957. Model, 12½ feet long and 11½ feet from keel to masthead, has working bronze guns, pumps and sails and was bought from Kuebler by Chicago bank for bicentennial exhibit. Sale price wasn't disclosed, but model has been insured for $1 million. (UPI)

Freedom Train attracts trouble as well as people

By ROBERT W. MERRY
Dow Jones-Ottaway News

It's 6:30 a.m. in Springfield, Ohio, a quiet farming community with 82,000 residents and no train station. A thick fog embraces the town, the air is crisp and dank. And on Washington Street, a crowd is gathering where the train station used to be.

There's not much there now: Dirty warehouses surrounding an empty parking lot; a lonely brick crackerbox building where a Penn Central trainmaster clings to the old days; large patches of clover and weeds pushing up through crumbling cement. The trains that pass through Springfield these days are like the wind: They do not stop.

An exception is the American Freedom Train, a museum on wheels scheduled to arrive with the dawn's early light on this morning. Now it's 6:40, and the crowd has grown to about a hundred, including lots of kids and two dogs. Why are they here? "To see the steam engine, mainly," says Jim Roberts, who runs a hobby shop. "You don't get a chance like this every day."

The American Freedom Train is moving west, tracing the paths of those settlers and adventurers who pushed through the country's vast western reaches on the way to manifest destiny. Laden with historical heirlooms and pulled by a giant Reading T-1 steam locomotive, the Freedom Train's 25 cars — all freshly painted in red, white, and blue — are calculated to tweak the country's national consciousness in these bicentennial times.

But like the westward-bound migrants of old, those operating the Freedom Train — at no government expense, they are quick to point out — are finding the going something less than smooth. That's clear enough right here in Springfield.

It's now 7 a.m., the crowd numbers close to 300, but still no train. Finally a policeman announces the Freedom Train will arrive about 8:30. "Well, let's go get some breakfast," sighs Roberts.

But an hour later he and the rest of the crowd are back. And then, with a series of whistle blasts, the huge mass of steel moves into town, and creaks to a halt.

A steam locomotive can bring out the crowds in these uncertain times. In Springfield the schedule called for a mere 15-minute water stop, and still hundreds turned out at dawn. Thousands more lined the route south to catch a glimpse as the train chugged through tiny villages and budding cornfields toward Cincinnati. Up north in Columbus, where the Freedom Train rested at a siding for 12 days, 147,000 persons passed through the museum cars. That's about 12,250 a day — at $2 for adults and $1 for kids.

And still it's not quite enough, says Ross E. Rowland, Jr. chairman of the American Freedom Train Foundation, the nonprofit organization that operates what is billed as the only nationwide bicentennial project currently under way. It was expensive getting the train on the tracks, says Rowland, and it's expensive to maintain the train on its planned 17,000-mile route.

"So far," says Rowland, a 34-year-old New York commodities broker, "we've made just about what we need to stay in business. But the last month has been under what we need. The problem is alerting the people that the product is there and what the product is."

Rowland, whose father and grandfather were both railroaders, is a licensed steam-locomotive engineer with a passion for old trains. His long-standing idea for a Bicentennial Freedom Train took root last year, when five corporations — Pepsi-Cola Co., Prudential Insurance Co. of America, Kraft Foods, General Motors Corp., and Atlantic Richfield Co. — each contributed $1 million to the project.

That was enough to acquire a train, renovate a couple of old steam engines, collect the artifacts, and put the show on the tracks. The rest of the project's $18 million budget was to come from admission fees and souvenir sales in the 80 cities and towns scheduled for train stopovers the next 18 months.

But three months and several communities after the train began its journey in Wilmington, Del., it is becoming clear that attendance and concessions receipts may not be enough to sustain the project. Still, Rowland wards off pessimism: "I can't believe this project will be allowed to die."

Not just tourist attraction

Desert dinosaur artist's dream

By ROY J. HARRIS, JR.
Dow Jones-Ottaway News

CABAZON, Calif. —. Along Interstate 10 northwest of Palm Springs, the wind-scoured desert, ringed with bare and jagged peaks, has an almost lunar beauty. Suddenly, as you drive along, there rises out of the desert a creature from the dimmest past. It grows in your car's windshield — and grows some more.

The monster is four stories high and half a football field long, and it weighs hundreds of tons; it is a Brontosaurus almost triple the size of the actual dinosaur of the Jurassic Period — the largest animal ever to walk the earth.

Looking at the bulging shoulder muscles, the curling tail, the rough-textured green hide, it is possible to forget for a moment that it is just steel and sculpted concrete. It is even possible briefly to ignore the fire escape (a grudging concession to safety) and the surroundings — a gas station, the Wheel-Inn Cafe, and other features of the roadside economy of Cabazon, population 750.

The dinosaur is much more than just another tourist attraction, however. It is the realized lifelong dream of one man, who built it himself, for its own sake, over 11 years at a personal cost of more than $100,000.

Some men aspire to board chairmen and retire as clerks; others want to be great athletes and wind up weekend bowlers. Claude Bell wanted to build with his own hands something memorable, something permanent, above all something big. He did it.

Bell is a small, wiry man who has been an artist-artisan all his life. At 78 years of age, operator of a portrait studio that has regularly grossed $140,000 a year, he could have retired in comfort long ago.

Yet he still spends most of his spare time, in fact half of every week, puttering around his giant reptile. To the residents of Cabazon, the figure in the flower-printed cap is so identified with his creation that he is known simply as "The Dinosaur Man."

Bell, who lives with his wife in a spartan cabin near the dinosaur when he's in town, says that maybe he'll get a little of his investment back by charging admission to a museum he is installing in the beast's cavernous belly. But profit clearly has little to do with it.

"If all he wanted to do was make money, he would have had that lizard up in a year or two," says Alice Richmond, a waitress at the Wheel-Inn, which Mr. Bell also owns.

Says Bell: "When you're doing something like this, you can forget about eating and sleeping, and just live on that tingle of enthusiasm. I've worked all through the night sometimes. A younger man probably couldn't plan this and do it; you need to build up the money, and the dedication, too. When you're young, you're too dumb, you run crazy after girls."

Bell has long been fascinated with the great dinosaurs. The one that fit his dream was, of course, the biggest — far bigger, far grander than any mere elephant.

Clearly, only a Brontosaurus, and outsize one at that, would do. And, since it would be his Brontosaurus, there would have to be a few modifications on the basic Jurassic model. The head, for example, displeased him: too small. He made it a little bigger. The project took shape in his drawings and plans, and in 1964 he broke ground.

Working week after week, Bell scrounged what he could and paid for the rest. He got steel from a washed-out bridge and concrete for the foundation from a road-builder's surplus. The construction, which he originally figured would only take a couple of years, stretched to four, five, a decade. An average of $10,000 a year was swallowed up by the beast.

The thought that someday his dream might actually be finished disturbs him. "Finished?" he says. "I'll never be finished. After the Brontosaurus, I'm going to build a Tyrannosaurus 65 feet high with a viewing platform in the head. After that, more, a whole dinosaur garden. I'm going on 80 and I've got 25 or 30 years left to live, I figure, and I'm going to work until I can't work anymore."

Trucker's strike key factor in Citizens Band boom

By JOHN RYAN
Dow Jones-Ottaway News

CHICAGO — "I remember one shot on the evening news showing the chief of the striking truckers flying along in a helicopter above the highway and using CB radio to instruct his members to get their rigs moving again. Just about anybody who saw scenes like that wanted to know more about the radios all those drivers were using."

Speaking is Carl Korn, president of Dynascan Corp., a Chicago importer of citizen-band radios, known as CBS. Most CB executives agree with Korn that the independent truckers' strike early last year was a major factor in triggering a sales boom in the simple two-way, short-range radios.

The truckers showed the public what CB could do and the public responded by making it a $300 million-a-year business in which manufacturers cannot meet the surging demand.

The term "citizens-band" refers to the 23 broadcast channels reserved by the government since 1958 for the service. The basic idea of CB is that from a set in, say, your home, office or car, you can converse with family members, employes or anyone else you need to who also has a CB.

The range of a CB set varies according to interference and other conditions, but a well-placed sender can usually be heard up to 20 miles. (Uncle Sam sets a 150-mile maximum). The most popular model put out by E. F. Johnson Co. of Waseka, Minn., the leading domestic manufacturer, sells for $159.95.

In economy and flexibility, CB outstrips other two-way systems. Amateur, or "ham," radio covers vast distances but costs far more (about $700 to get started), requires passing a difficult examination and cannot be used for business.

The land-mobile, or business service used by such agencies as police departments and large taxi fleets, is also more costly than CB, is limited to a specific frequency in a particular area and is off limits to personal messages. CB, in contrast, can be used for both business and personal conversation, and its channels will function anywhere in North America.

Although not everyone bothers with the $4, five year license issued without a test by the Federal Communications Commission, applications offer some measure of CBS growth. In 1973 there were 246,000 new licenses; last year the number jumped to 425,000, and in 1975 it is expected to hit one million.

There are believed to be about 6.3 million CBs in use in the U.S., and they can be found in an estimated one of every five trucks and one in seven recreational vehicles as well as a growing number of passenger cars.

Truckers remain zealous missionaires of the medium, viewing it as a way to dispel the hypnotic tedium of driving the interstate system as well as a professional tool for keeping advised of road conditions and reporting accidents.

Truck drivers often use CB to get around the 55-mile-an-hour speed limit by alerting each other to the whereabouts of "Smokey the Bear," as a highway patrolman is called because many wear hats resembling that sported by the Forest Service symbol. (An unmarked police car is "a smokey in a plain wrapper.")

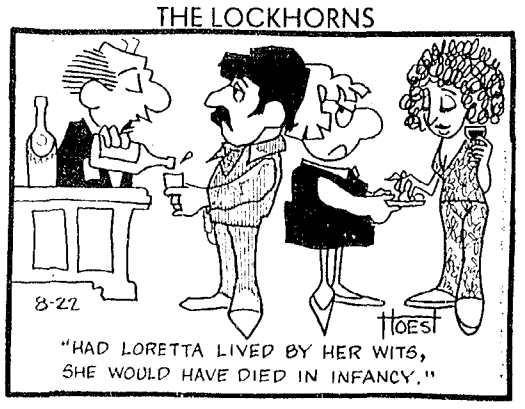

Similarly, some truckers, warned by other drivers via CB, avoid open weighing stations, termed "chicken coops." Despite such antics, CB seems to be improving trucker-police relations as more states encourage its use by their highway patrols.

Last September, Missouri began experimental use of CB in about a dozen police cars, with the number growing to 100 by February.

In that time, CB-equipped truckers and motorists reported 27 wrong-way drivers, resulting in 11 arrests; 119 apparently drunk motorists, of whom 101 were booked; 31 speeders (22 arrests); and 27 criminal cases, such as kidnapping and theft (21 arrests).

Also turned up were 120 accidents, 50 road hazards, 94 stranded motorists and five sick or injured persons. Having thus been shown, the 'Show-Me State' has installed CB in all 750 of its highway patrol cars.

INVITATION FOR BIDS
The Price Township Supervisors will receive sealed bids for the resurfacing of approximately 7,044 feet of roadway.

The work in general will include all labor, material, equipment, and transportation necessary to place approximately 15,653 square yards of bituminous surface treatment in accordance with the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation Form 408, Section 480.

A bid for approximately 15,653 square yards of ID-2A surface course 1" in depth will be received as an alternate.

Bid proposals will be received until 7:30 o'clock P.M. local time on August 11, 1975, at the home of Mr. Gard O'Harra, Sr., R.D. 4, East Stroudsburg, Pa., at which time and place all bids will be publicly opened and read aloud.

Contract Documents, including Technical Specifications, are on file at the office of Edward C. Hess Associates, Inc., 33 North 7th Street, Stroudsburg, Pa.

Copies of the Contract Documents may be obtained by paying $5.00 for each set of documents obtained.

A certified check or bank draft, payable to the order of the Monroe County Commissioners or a satisfactory Bid Bond executed by the Bidder and an acceptable surety, in an amount equal to ten per cent (10) of the total Bid shall be submitted with each bid.

The successful Bidder will be required to furnish and pay for satisfactory performance and payment bond or bonds in the amount of not less than one hundred per cent (100) of the estimated amount. An acceptable surety company is any one included in the latest issue of the U.S. Treasury Department Circular 570 listings.

Attention is called to the fact that not less than the minimum applicable salaries and wages must be paid on this Project, and that the Contractor must ensure that employees and applicants for employment are not discriminated against because of race, color, religion, sex or national origin.

The Price Township Supervisors reserve the right to reject any or all Bids or to waive any informalities in the bidding.

Bids may be held by the Price Township Supervisors for a period not to exceed thirty (30) days from the date of the opening of Bids for the purpose of reviewing the Bids and investigating the qualifications of the Bidders, prior to awarding of the Contract.
